ALL VILLAGE OFFICIALS ARE ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION

There will be no election in Madoc Village this year as all village officials were elected by acclamation at the nomination meeting held on Thursday night of last week.

Reeve — Thomas Burnside.
Councillors — T. C. Barton, Mel Caverly, Cecil Hagerman and Bruce White.
Hydro Commissioner — T. H. Rupert.

Public School Trustees — Durland Adams, George Devolin and Thomas Ross.

Only about twenty ratepayers attended the nomination meeting and these included 14 either elected or appointed village officials.
Miss Olive Ashe, clerk-treasurer of the village, acted as chairman of the meeting which followed the official nomination. During this meeting, Reeve Burnside paid tribute to two former village officials who had passed away during the year, Jack Livingstone, treasurer, and Dave Genereaux, street foreman. Mr. Burnside said the village was in a much better financial position than it had been in a number of years and besides reducing the mill rate this year, the village had been able to create a fund whereby some working capital would be available. He said that he had hoped to put the water and sewage in the west part of the village this fall, but the lowest tender was considerably more than the engineer's estimate. New tenders would be called this coming winter and he hoped the work would be started as soon as weather conditions were suitable. In concluding his remarks, Mr. Burnside said he did not know if the small attendance was an indication that the ratepayers were disinterested or that they were satisfied with the manner in which the village affairs were being conducted.

All the councillors were present and reported for the committees of which they were chairman: Cecil Hagerman, streets and sidewalks; Mel Caverly, property; T. C. Barton, waterworks; Bruce White, Police and Fire Department.

In his remarks, Mr. Hagerman referred to the delay in oiling the streets last summer which he said was due to the weather and the fault of the contractor. He felt that Elgin and Prince Albert streets should be given a permanent surface, due to the amount of traffic, but didn't know where the council would get the money to do the work.

George Devolin, chairman of the Public School Board, in his report, paid tribute to the Principal and teaching staff whom he said were doing an excellent job and were graduating pupils well qualified to enter secondary school. He mentioned the three-room addition to the school and said the delay in building the addition was not the fault of the Board or of the village council.

Harry Roscoe, the village's representative on the Centre Hastings Secondary School Board, in his report said that the attendance at the school here was increasing every year and in order that the school should function properly, at least seven new class rooms are needed. At present many of the classes are overcrowded and the enrolment is expected to be larger next year.

ELECTION IN HUNTINGDON TOWNSHIP

In Huntingdon Township Goldie McInroy was re-elected Reeve by acclamation, but there will be an election with five running for the council: Wesley Farrell, Edward Fleming, Kenneth A. Holland, Russell Sills and George Wood.

ELECTION IN TUDOR AND CASHEL FOR SCHOOL TRUSTEE

In Tudor and Cashel the reeve, Verse McMurray and members of the council were elected by acclamation, but there will be an election to fill one seat on the School Board, County School Area No. 1, North Hastings. Mr. John Deshane and Rev. William Mallory, both of Gilmour will contest the seat.

ELECTION IN ELZEVR TOWNSHIP

There will be an election in Elzevir Township for reeve, four councillors and five school trustees.

The incumbent Reeve, Clayton McMurray will be opposed by Kenneth Smith who has sat for a number of years on the council.

The following will contest four seats as councillors: E. Alexander, K. Cassidy, Wm. Credicott, J. Kehoe, and C. Reavie.

For school trustee the following have qualified: R. Eaton, H. DeClair, Gordon C. Millwright, F. Lucas, A. Ramsay and Geo. Speck.

PROVINCIAL POLICE WEEKLY REPORT

"TRESPASSERS" - a word that the Madoc Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police has heard quite often in the past few weeks, mainly from farmers in the Townships of Rawdon, Huntingdon, and Hungerford. Most of these trespassers are hunters who appear to have little regard for private property. During the past week detachment officers investigated two complaints of farm animals being found dead. Both had been shot, either by accident or by a deliberate act of senseless slaughter. A word to the wise - all land is either public or private, if it is private, it is unlawful to enter upon it without the authority of the owner. Section one of the Petty Trespass Act reads as follows:

"Every person who unlawfully enters or in any other way trespasses upon another person's land,

- (a) that is enclosed,
- (b) that is a garden or lawn; or
- (c) with respect to which he has had notice by word of mouth or in writing, or by posters or sign boards so placed as to be visible from every point of access to the land, not to trespass.

and whether or not any damage has been occasioned thereby, is guilty of an offense and on summary conviction is liable to a fine of not less than $10.00 and not more than $100.00.

Eleven traffic accidents were investigated during the past week, in only one, however, were there any serious injuries. On Friday, November 25th, John Gilmartin of Kitchener, Ontario was driving a transport on Highway 7 west of Madoc, when it left the road and struck the rock cut at Rose's Hill. Mr. Gilmartin was taken by ambulance to the Belleville General Hospital where he remains with a fractured leg, a severe laceration to his head and internal injuries. He is, however, in satisfactory condition. The transport sustained over $1,000.00 damages.

Detachment officers investigated 23 occurrences, including the breaking and entering of Armstrong's General Store and Post Office at Sulphide. The store was entered during the night of November 23-24, a quantity of cigarettes, drinks, food and silver from the Post Office were stolen. Investigation continues into this matter.

A total of 39 vehicles were checked during the week, 10 charges were laid and 20 warnings were issued. Twenty-four convictions were registered in Magistrate's Court, 17 were for traffic violations, six for liquor and one criminal.

There will be four bands in the parade, the Campbellford Municipal Band, the former Hastings and Prince Edward Band, The Madoc District Band and the High School Cadet Band. Besides the floats, there will be at least 20 majorettes, clowns, etc. and of course Santa Claus. Those in charge of arrangements claim this year's parade will be the biggest and

CAR DESTROYED BY FIRE ENROUTE TO FLORIDA

Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Naylor had the misfortune to have their 1965 Chevrolet completely destroyed by fire while on their way to Florida this week. While travelling on U.S. highway No. 15, north of Harrisburg, Penn. their car stopped and it was found the motor was entirely in flames.

Mr. and Mrs. Naylor got out of the vehicle without any injury and were able to save most of the contents of the heavily loaded car. The car was completely destroyed by fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Naylor are remaining in Pennsylvania until a new car can be purchased and taken down to them, when they will continue on to Florida where they plan to spend the winter.

By Glen May

A way of life

With the collapse of the feudal system in the late 1860's, the islands of Japan cast to the wind most of the traditional arts of hand to hand combat.

An ordinance, prohibiting the samurai (knights) from wearing swords in 1871 started a fast decline of all martial arts, and ju-jitsu was no exception.

Jigoro Kano, who was to become the founder of judo, was at that time a student at Tokyo Imperial University. A man of no sizeable physique, he found himself being bullied constantly by larger students.

After hearing about ju-jitsu, an exercise by which a small man could defeat an opponent of herculean strength, he made up his mind to learn all he could about this form of defense. However, owing to social conditions at that time, most of the ju-jitsu masters had turned to other occupations, and he encountered difficulty in locating a suitable teacher.

Finally he met Teinosuke Yagi, an old master, who initiated him in the rudiments of ju-jitsu. He later studied at other schools and finally in 1882 he established his own school calling it Ko-do-kan, "school to study the way."

There he taught his own exercise, calling it judo, instead of ju-jitsu. He continued to study at other schools to improve his own exercises until he attained a height unknown to ju-jitsu.

Although Kano found ju-jitsu interesting and realized its effective training of the body and mind, he did find that it was not devised for physical education or moral and intellectual training. It was exclusively devised for winning by most any means.

By taking all the good points of the various schools, he added his own innovations, and actually founded a new system for physical culture and mental training. This new form of unarmed combat was called Kodokan Judo.

Kodokan Judo has wider aims are different, although it is generally based on ju-jitsu. Where than ju-jitsu and its techniques ju-jitsu is often violent and dangerous, the emphasis in judo is on gentleness. The word judo, when translated, means "the gentle way."

The Kodokan made fast progress and won wide public recognition, and in 1886 it gained undisputed leadership in its field. With social conditions in the country improving the old ju-jitsu schools were making a comeback, and Tokyo Police took an active interest in the revival of ju-jitsu, as well as other martial arts.

The new Kodokan Judo was the centre of attention. Everyone admired its slogans and high idealism, but its practical merits in combat were looked upon with doubt, and even contempt.

The rivalry began between the two arts.

In 1888 the Tokyo Chief of Police arranged a grand tournament between the two systems. Defeat would have meant an end to Kodokan.

There were 15 men picked for each side. Kodokan won all but two fights, and these ended in draws. This victory decided once and for all the supremacy of Kodokan Judo, not only in principle, but also in technique.

The technical formula of Kodokan Judo was completed in 1887 while its spiritual phase was gradually built up until it was perfected in 1922. From there it spread all over the world. Today judo clubs are located all across Canada.

Judo, which is actually a social movement, carries the following slogan: "Maximum efficiency with minimum effort and mutual welfare and benefit."

Gene Doersam, one of Canada's leading judo instructors, summed it up by saying, "To know a technique is not enough, but to understand it and its principle or philosophy, is the ultimate desire of the true judoka or student."

"Judo cannot be taught in 10 easy lessons for it is a way of life."

Diary of a Vagabond by Dorothy Barker

Safety Is More Than A Slogan

Somehow or other we are inclined to connect "safety" only with highway traffic. Though this is important it is only a fraction of our desire to survive the hazards of modern existence. Industry, shipping, even store management are all constantly on the alert to prevent accidents. CN, for instance, has an ever-growing programme aimed not alone at the safety of its employees, but the traveling public as well.

Considering highway safety again for a moment, I remember when I edited a weekly newspaper I wrote frequent editorials about the benefit of driver instruction in our high schools. I didn't get very far, for the principal of our local high school was against any extra-curricular activity of this nature, even though the Jaycees in our town had offered to provide a car and instructor. Today, driver competitions for students are sponsored on the provincial and national level. Those who enter the competition have all had instruction under the supervision of their school driving courses.

The idea has spread and I am glad to announce that many more schools will have driving instructors and thousands of eager young motorists will have the benefit of expert instruction in every phase of driving and highway safety. This is a result of the teacher preparation courses in high school driver instruction held this past summer at the Ryerson Polytechnical Institute in Toronto. The courses, sponsored by the Ontario Safety League, were well attended. Forty-five teachers graduated in the course completed July 15th and two more courses were held before the schools reopened September 6th. Those taking the course were all high school teachers.

In the past two years CN, carrying out its safety campaign, has installed new railway crossings reflectorized signs. These are at level crossings across the nation where flashing signals would not be practical. They number over a thousand and are to be seen in every one of the ten provinces.

Hamilton's Safety Week

I got on this safety kick because of a news item I received about safety week in Hamilton, Ontario. I feel it deserves publicity for if the idea spreads there are bound to be less drownings, highway mutilations and fewer drivers trying to beat trains to a crossing.

This is what I read: "Members of the Hamilton Safety Council are constantly striving to alert citizens to the hazards which may result in injury, death or destruction in traffic, on the water or in the home. Theirs is a year-round effort. The biggest one-day promotion is the popular Christmas safety parade. Other projects are the bicycle road, safety week, the baby sitters' course for teenagers, and a safety village which is operated daily throughout the summer at the Greater Hamilton shopping centre."

"This year safety week was a triumph for ingenuity, planning and hard work. Kenneth B. Woods, president of the Hamilton Safety Council, attributes the success of the week to the hard work of its members whom he describes as "one of the most enthusiastic groups of unpaid members to be found anywhere."

COUNT-DOWN IN THE SIN BIN

A town in Western Ontario has a local hockey league that saves money by not using penalty timekeepers. It is as simple as this:

The other night a player in his first game drew a two-minute penalty.

He skated to the sin - bin which was devoid of officials.

He called the referee and asked him about the penalty timekeeper who wasn't there.

"Oh," explained the official. "We don't use 'em here."

"All a penalized player does if he draws a minor, is count to 120 and let himself out."

DEAR DORIS

advice from

Religious Bondage

DEAR DORIS — The church I go to is very strict. Now at my age of 14 I feel I have a right to decide if I should continue in the fellowship. My parents are both deeply religious and I am sure it would break their hearts if I stopped coming.

I am not allowed to watch TV, go to movies, fairs, or join any clubs at all. I am only allowed to eat with people of my own denomination.

However, may I make it clear that I would not leave until I was of mature age.

Revisited Bob

DEAR BOB — You wouldn't be normal if you weren't a little restless. Yet my greatest sympathy goes to the teen-agers whose parents have no religion at all.

As for television and movies, you aren't missing too much. You'd rather live it up yourself than watch somebody else on a screen. And there must be social activities at school which don't require joining a club.

The time does come when each person decides for himself what he believes and how he wants to worship God. Not at 14; but at a more mature age, as you suggest.

DEAR DORIS — My husband and I have been married for three months and nearly everything is perfect. But he is not satisfied because I can only respond to his love-making with affection.

Could there be something psychologically wrong with me? I try so hard because I know it bothers him.

DEAR BRIDE — Not a thing wrong, psychologically or any other way. Self-expression takes time, and this applies to expressing love in marriage, as in other things.

More knowledge would enable your husband to be more helpful and less unhappy. I'm sending you my list of recommended good reading about this important part of wedded life.

DEAR DORIS — Could you please tell me how to make my eyes appear larger and brighter than they really are, without having a heavy make-up look? My eyes are light green. Also, I would like to know how to make a nose look thinner.

Green Eyes

DEAR GREEN EYES — Apply this rule: If your make-up is obvious, you've laid it on too thick. You need individual advice from someone who can study your coloring and select the right shades of powder, foundation, eye shadow and so on, for you. Consult the expert at your favorite cosmetic counter.

About your nose: After a light foundation, apply a little darker shade on the sides of the nose; repeat this when applying powder.

I'm sending you my leaflet on Make-Up Magic (and will forward this to any others writing in for it and enclosing 10 cents and a stamped envelope).

To Nurse — Public health nursing is a tremendous calling. Our Canadian V.O.N. (Victorian Order of Nurses) now has 650 professional nurses working across Canada. She nurses, teaches health, helps a fearful young mother begin to care for her new baby. She dresses wounds, encourages a handicap in the use of crutches or contrivances.

She is a ministering angel. To learn more about this branch of public health nursing, write to Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, 5 Blackburn Avenue, Ottawa 2, Ontario.

REMINISCING

taken from the Review files of 50, 25 and 15 years ago.

50 YEARS AGO

December 14, 1916.

On Wednesday, December 6, in St. John's Church during the service of intercession for our soldiers and sailors, there was dedicated a solid silver set of communion vessels. This set arrived from England during the afternoon and are very beautiful. They are inscribed, "To the Glory of God and in loving memory of George Ullathorne Smart, who died for his country in the great war of 1916".

The plant of the Quaker Oats Company of Peterborough was destroyed by fire Monday afternoon. Seven were killed and eighteen injured. This plant worth half a million dollars and one of the finest of its kind in Canada, was completely destroyed.

Four more men have signed up with the 254th; Alex Seddons, Bancroft; George F. Sprackett, Gilmour; George Ed. Willman and Clarence Dafeo, Gilmour. Mr. Seddons stays at Bancroft in the interests of recruiting. Mr. Willman is a general merchant at Gilmour. The Madoc Platoon now numbers 15.

Charles Stevens who we reported last week as having been wounded, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal for conspicuous services. Although twice wounded, he remained at his post and carried messages under heavy fire. He captured two unwounded prisoners.

The Eldorado minister is not the only one not acquainted with the Madoc minister's wives. If the Madoc ministers would bring their wives to visit Eldorado more often, the people in general might know them better. We heard one of our ministers say that the knowledge of one's preachers wife was a superabundance.

The citizens were shocked of learning of the sudden death on Monday of Mr. Mackintosh, ex-Public School Inspector of Hastings County. Paralysis was the cause of death.

A memorial service for the late Gunner Fred Miller will be held in the Methodist Church on Friday at 2:00 p.m.

Mr. W. K. Ellis wishes to thank his friends and neighbours who so kindly showed their sympathy by many acts of kindness during the illness and death of their son.

25 YEARS AGO

December 11, 1941

Reeves of the northern municipalities of the county attending the December session of the County Council predicted a serious shortage of cordwood for the coming year. This was due principally to the large number of wood-cutters who have left to join the forces or to work in war industrial plants. Prices for cutting the wood have advanced from $1.50 a cord to $3.00 but few are taking advantage of the increased wages. Prices per cord of wood have also taken a sharp increase. Delivered in Belleville, it has jumped from $7.50 and $8.50 a cord to $12.00.

Communication — To the Editor of the Review: I am forwarding an account of my marriage in Scotland. All my relations live around Madoc and it is fourteen years since I left there, and twelve years since I last heard from any of my brothers or sisters or my father, William Holmes of Eldorado. I had one married sister there, Mrs. John Fitzgerald and one unmarried sister living with my father, also two brothers living elsewhere. I would like to know if they are at the same addresses and if my father is living. Signed Pie. James Holmes.

Wedding — At York House, Perth, Scotland, Pte. W. J. Holmes of the Canadian Forestry Corps was married to Jessie Kathleen, daughter of Mrs. Wallace and the late Mr. William Wallace, Lagreath, Pitlochry, Bridesmaid was Miss Madge Irwin, Pitlochry and Pte. Alick Budge, Canadian Forestry Corps, was best man. The service was conducted by the Rev. Donald Findlay, Moulin.

The marriage took place at the United Church Parsonage, Madoc on Monday noon, December 1, of Harold Percy McCann to Clara Bella Willman of Madoc Twp. They were accompanied by Nicholas Love and Miss Dora Willman. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. A.

Poulter.

On Monday evening, Mr. William Deline and Miss Miriam Lloyd, both of Actinolite, were united in marriage by Rev. Alfred Poulter at the United Church Parsonage. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rogers, of Tweed.

Obituary — Mr. Wharton Henry Jarvis, long time resident of Baldwin Park, California, died October 17, after a short illness. Mr. Jarvis was born in Madoc, Ontario, September 25, 1867. His wife survives him, also a brother, James, of Red Deer, Alberta.

On Tuesday night, November 27, Confirmation services were held in St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc, with a large congregation in attendance. Seventeen candidates of the Madoc parish were presented by the rector, Rev. T. Harvey Good, for confirmation to most Rev. John Ryons, Archbishop of Ontario. Chrysanthemums were used for floral decoration and the interior of the church had been recently decorated. Gifts from Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Barton were in memory of Mrs. Barton's parents, the late Frank and Mrs. Smith, both very active workers in the church. Immediately preceding the service, a "Reredos" was received by the Archbishop. This, also was a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Barton in memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Smith. Rev. Hope Swaynes of Picton, a friend of the family, attended the service.

I AM QUITE CONTENT IN ONTARIO, SAYS ROBERTS

MONTREAL (CP) — Premier John Roberts of Ontario said Wednesday he is not a candidate for the national leadership of the Progressive Conservative party.

"I am quite content and I am happy with my job in Ontario," he told a press conference following a speech to the Advertising and Sales Executives Club in Montreal.

Mr. Roberts said he is not interested in fighting for the position of prime minister of Canada and would not accept even a draft for the leadership.

TED FOLEY, FOXBORO FACTORY, EXHIBITS BEST CHEESE IN SHOW

A 35-year-old cheese maker's helper who has never operated a factory on his own has won the grand championship at the British Empire Dairy Show being held in Belleville this week.

He is Ted Foley, of Belleville, cheese maker's assistant at the Foxboro Cheese Factory whose open class of October cheese scored a total of 98.35 points. His prize winning cheese had a flavor score of 43.55 points.

This year was the first time which Mr. Foley had entered cheese in the show on his own, although last year he entered jointly with his factory owner, Harold Elliott. Mr. Foley has been making cheese for 10 years, six as helper at the Eldorado Cheese Factory and two years with Mr. Elliott.

Reserve Champion at the cheese show was Harold Montgomery of Monkland in Eastern Ontario. Mr. Montgomery's cheese scored 98.20 points with a 43.30 flavour score.

As grand champion of the show, Mr. Foley gets the T. Eaton Company trophy while Mr. Montgomery received the Simpsons-Sears Ltd. counterpart for placing as reserve champion.

Other Quinte district cheese makers also scored high in the open show classes. These included Ivan Sine of Eldorado, Ernie Reid of Stirling, Glen Anderson of Campbellford and Delbert Rowe of Halloway.

Mr. Reid had the best June and July cheese in the open class, while Harold Montgomery of Monkland was high in both the August and September classes. Donald Pollock of Campbellford had the highest scoring block cheese and also was top in the Stilton class.

WINS CHEESE DISPLAY
Harold Elliott, Foxboro Cheese Factory, won the factory cheese display. Other entries, Glen Anderson, Don Pollock, Grant Hughes and Walter Joss, finished in that order.

The mature cheese class was won by Donat Herbert of St. Albert, Ont. The cheese show at 191 Front St., Belleville, was open to the public all day Wednesday and Thursday. Admission is free and some of the prize winning cheese is being offered for retail sale.

TWINS DEFEAT GANANOQUE

(By Don F. Bailey)

Madoc arena was the scene last Friday night for a fast, crowd-thrilling hockey game as Tweed-Madoc Twins defeated the Gananoque club 10-4. The Twins really put up some great action for the small gallery in attendance, small, due to too many other social functions scheduled for that same evening in Madoc.

Gene Francis and Ab Reid proved the stars of the game as they fired four goals each. Gordy Donaldson and Bob Geen were the other Twins scorers. Credit also goes to Bob Morrow in the net, who came up with a total of 37 saves, eight of which were clear break-aways for Gananoque. Another great aid to the Twins was Barry Pyear, who lead many a rush up through the Gananoque defense.

However, Gananoque was no push-over as the score may indicate. They played right along all the way, however, as mentioned, Bob Morrow was their curse. I cannot recall their net minders' name, but he stopped 42 of the 52 blistering shots fired at him by the Twins.

"A great game, the best I've seen" commented one spectator, referring to all the Twins' games this year and last.

"PORTRAITS FROM THE PAST" A BEAUTIFUL SPECTACLE

At the Madoc Armouries last Friday night the public was privileged to see an entrancing panorama of beautiful and colourful historic costumes such as might have been worn by Canadian women of yesteryear from 1620 to the early 1920's. These ranged all the way from the homespun Indian tunic, fringed, and ornamented with beads and deerskin thongs, to a gorgeous hooped Parisian gown of copper-coloured satin with large ostrich-plumed hat and harmonizing cape which Madame de Champlain might have worn; from rich taffetas with bustles of a later period to a stunningly beautiful copy of Queen Victoria's wedding dress; from severe Quakeress dress and bonnet of black with white apron and collar to a wide-frilled, hoop-skirted dress of pink taffeta trimmed with bands of blue velvet ribbon for a debutante; from a long beige motoring duster complete with gauntlets and broadbrimmed hat tied on with a veil, to a magnificent green velvet riding habit with its stiff hat and flowing yellow scarf; from a leg-o-mutton sleeved, full-skirted tennis uniform to a cherry red skating costume lavishly trimmed with white fur; and last of all, the Centennial Queen symbolizing Canadian youth in an elegant white satin gown, and ruby red velvet cloak lined with gold lame, and wearing a jewelled diadem and the royal rose.

As there were forty delightful costumes in all, it would be impossible to describe each in detail, but we really must mention the sweet little-girl costumes with their sun-bonnets and aprons and demure frilly pantalets and also the Floradora Girl who captivated all with her aqua satin-clad hour-glass figure, her matching big-hat and parasol and her wiggle.

Among Famous Women from the Past were Laura Secord, Lady Macdonald (wife of Sir John A.), Annie Koerber (movie star Marie Dressler), Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless who founded the first Women's Institute, Pauline Johnston (poetess), Dr. Stowe (medicine) We are rightly proud of our heritage.

This entertainment treat was made possible by the Madoc and District Centennial Committee, who obtained the costumes and commentary from the Ontario Centennial Planning Branch in Toronto. Much of the credit goes to Chairman John Wagner, Mrs. Warren Hill and to Miss Olive Ashe who took the initiative and the responsibility for this delightful show, while the appropriate background music provided throughout by Miss Lamorne West was most effective.

The Ontario Centennial Branch tells us that these costumes are not heirloom pieces but are designed to help those involved in costuming plays, pageants, parades and other centennial events. Basic patterns of certain costumes are available from Toronto. This costume display is one of two displays which are touring the province. The fact that they are booked solid until next June indicates the lively interest being taken by the rest of the province in our centennial year.

This "Portraits of the Past" is just a beginning. We hope that it has sparked the interest of Madoc and District and that already fresh ideas are germinating. To make Centennial Year worthwhile and memorable we need the full co-operation of all the organizations and of each individual. Our neighbouring towns have already planned many events. Let us not be outdone by them!

We have heard of Santa Claus parades featuring replicas of the costumes in historical tableaux; of each local organization being responsible for a big window display for a 3-week period; of a fine old stone house being converted into an historical museum; of an auction sale of antiques with the proceeds being used to buy paint for public buildings in the town; the planting of trees and shrubs to beautify the community What ideas have YOU?

A meeting will be called shortly. Do come with your suggestions and your readiness to help. We quote from one of our public-minded citizens: "Service is the rent we pay for room on Earth."

Here follows the cast and assistants of the "Portraits":

TWEED TO HAVE FEMALE REEVE

A firm-spoken doctor's wife will be the first woman reeve of Tweed village.

Mrs. A. G. (Barbara) Allen, a village councillor, was nominated with incumbent Guy Hughes last Thursday night.

However, Mr. Hughes today said he would not qualify.

"You can confirm I will not be running," he said definitely.

But Mrs. Allen's acclamation does not clear the local political picture for her village.

There may have to be a second nomination meeting - for the second successive year.

Only two names were placed on the slate for the four council seats. The same thing happened at nomination night in 1965.

It is now expected a second meeting will be held later.

Mrs. Allen lost no time in telling her fellow citizens what she thought of the showing.

"It was a terrible meeting," she said today. "I told them I deplored the lack of public interest."

Mrs. Allen already had four years experience as a school board member before becoming a councillor.

She is not sure what possible changes the first woman reeve might bring about in the municipality.

A second woman may join Mrs. Allen in council affairs.

Mrs. Ted Courneyea was one of the two lonely nominees for council at Thursday night's meeting.

The other was Stewart Lesard.

In other nominations, Ken Little and Herb Cox were returned to the school board and Jim Halpenny as Public Utilities Commissioner.

COOPER

This community was shocked and grieved to hear of the sudden death of a former pastor, The Rev. Virgil Plager in Arnprior Hospital, November 19th.

He was the guest minister for the Centennial Anniversary Services of the Cooper Church, July 29 and 30. A number of friends went by bus and car to visit the funeral parlor November 21st or attend the funeral service, November 22.

Mrs. Rex Rollins spent last week in Toronto attending a Director's meeting of the Provincial Board of Women's Institutes.

Mr. Wm. Mathews, Sr., is spending a few days in Toronto.

A number of the ladies went by bus to Yorkville Shopping Plaza on Saturday, to do their Christmas shopping.

IN MEMORIAM

BENNY — In loving memory of a dear husband, James Neil Benny who died on December 22, 1965.

No morning or night returns
But what I think of you, dear Neil
In a quiet country graveyard

Where the breezes gently blow Lies a dear beloved one that I lost one year ago.

He left behind an aching heart
That loved him most sincere
I never have and never will Forget you, Neil, dear.

Silent is the chair,
Vacant is the chair,
But sweet are the memories
That linger there.

I miss him in silence unseen,
And live in memories of joy
That might have been.
Sadly missed by his wife, Rose.

HASTINGS COUNTY 4-H PROGRAM AWARDS' NIGHT

The 4-H program in Hastings County for the year 1966 and with respect to Agricultural clubs came to a close in Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc on Friday evening, November 25. The program was under the direction of the Hastings County Club Leaders' Assoc. with the President, Grant Ketcheson of Madoc, acting as chairman. One of the Club leader's wives, Mrs. Douglas Farrell, provided the music. The guest speaker on this occasion was Mr. Paul W. Couse. Briefly his background is as follows:

Mr. Couse is chairman of the Ont. Agricultural College Alumni Foundation, past president of the O.A.C. Alumni Assoc., member of the Senate of the University of Guelph, Director of the University of Guelph Alumni Association, a member of the Advertising and Sales Club of Toronto, Councillor of the Conservation Council of Ontario, and President of the Ontario Institute of Agrologists. He comes from Peel County. Following graduation from O.A.C., he joined the staff of Master Feeds. His family, including two teenagers, live in Oakville. Mr. Couse has a very deep interest in education, particularly agricultural education. He directed part of his address to the parents and part to the 4-H members. He clearly defined the needs of education in agriculture at all levels. This included the primary producer right to the consumer. He challenged the young people to use every type of assistance to establish their goal in life at the earliest possible age. He also challenged them to work toward this goal following a program that would help them to achieve it to their complete satisfaction. He pointed out their initial goal would likely be defined as a stage of formal education. In actual practice they will likely find this is only the beginning. The need to go on in the field of learning in all forms, will quickly become apparent. The final assessment will be that the process of learning continues all through the individuals' lifetime.

A very large number of awards were presented during the evening. The primary awards were stated in the program as follows:

Outstanding Club of the Year — Stirling 4-H Calf Club.
Outstanding Member during his membership in 4-H Agricultural Work — Calvin Sharp, R.R. 3, Stirling.
High boy for the Year — John Murray, R.R. 1, Stirling.
High Girl for the Year — Dianne Gunning, R.R. 2, Tweed.

Individual club records summarize the efforts of the members during the whole project season. Top members in each club win these honours on a basis of total points covering all phases of their work. They are as follows:

Stirling 4-H Calf Club, Ralph Dunham, R.R. 2, Harold; Belleville 4-H Calf Club, Douglas Eggerton, R.R. 6, Belleville; L'Amable 4-H Calf Club, Elizabeth Churcher, R.R. 1, Bancroft; Belleville 4-H Jersey Calf Club, Robert Jarrell, R.R. 6, Belleville; Marmora 4-H Calf Club, Clark Brown, Bonarlaw; Tyendinaga 4-H Calf Club, William Treverton, R.R. 1, Corbyville; Madoc 4-H Calf Club, Linda Sexsmith, R.R. 2, Madoc; Coe Hill 4-H Calf Club, David Campbell, R.R. 3, Coe Hill; Tweed 4-H Calf Club, Neil Reavie, R.R. 1, Flinton; Senior 4-H Livestock Management Program, John Murray, R.R. 1, Stirling; Hastings 4-H Swine Club, Dianne Gunning, R.R. 1, Tweed; Hastings 4-H Corn Club, Edward Wilson, R.R. 2, Bonarlaw; Madoc 4-H Potato Club, Karen Reavie, R.R. 1, Flinton; Hastings and Northumberland 4-H Engineering Club, Harry Huffman, R.R. 1, Corbyville; Hastings 4-H Hay-Pasture Club, John Murray, R.R. 1, Stirling; Hastings High Schools' 4-H Grain Club, Harry Huffman, R.R. 1, Corbyville; Tweed-Hungerford District High School 4-H Forestry Club, Dianne Gunning, R.R. 1, Tweed; Hastings 4-H Farm and Home Electric Club, Gail Bertrand, R.R. 1, Mar-

The evening closed with a short valedictory address given by the outstanding member graduating from 4-H club work. This year's winner, Calvin Sharp, is currently in the first year diploma course, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph. A resume of the speech has been prepared and reads as follows:

"It only seems like yesterday that I was sitting in a seat like many of you first year members, participating to some extent, in the Award Night activities. As I sat listening to Mr. Ron Heath performing the same duty as I am doing tonight, I could not help but think of what an honour it would be. Since, I have achieved this goal, I not only find it an honour, but an excellent opportunity to express my thoughts and appreciation for my gains which have been received throughout my 4-H career."

I have to admit this program has so much to offer, that the other activities going on around it cast very strong competition for a successful program to be carried out. Due to education pressing upon us so hard, it seems to limit a smaller participation in this program as time lapses. But, I have come to the conclusion already, that if you wish to acknowledge yourselves in agriculture, it will play a very important role in our lives. At the present time, your 4-H projects will act as part of the requirements for a course at Ontario Agriculture College.

An example which makes me appreciate my 4-H training, is the fact that I am capable of judging and giving an adequate set of reasons. How would you feel if you had to get up in front of a class and give a set of reasons for the first time in your life? It would not be quite so bad, if the majority of boys who attend Ontario Agriculture College had not had this past experience. If you have not been in 4-H work and had this opportunity it is rather an embarrassing situation when the time comes.

Of course, I know that all members, here to-night, interests do not lie in the agriculture industry like my own, but, even so this program can prepare you in many other factors of life.

I can truly say that over the past seven years I have met many people and saw many different things. Not only this, we have an excellent opportunity of working with the Agricultural Representatives, Assistants and Club Leaders who have a greater emphasis on building us up to be better citizens for the future.

As I found myself getting into 4-H work deeper and deeper, more opportunities came around. 4-H Leadership Week, which is held annually at Guelph, was very rewarding in many ways. The boys I met were an outstanding group of lads, with a week to gain knowledge and friendship. It just didn't seem possible that I would be selected from the 51 boys there and be given the honour of representing Ontario at Michigan State this past summer. I do not expect I shall ever have such an honour again in my life. For two weeks we had the experience of participating in a four scale development program with these boys. The agenda consisted of physical, mental, social and religious training.

Believe me, this has been the greatest experience any person could ever wish for. It has been such a great advancement for my life ahead. I only hope that each 4-H member can achieve the same results. In concluding I would like to leave with each 4-H member this quotation, "Give all you have to offer and it will give back to you all it has."

Some people's idea of dieting is to have black coffee if they have ice cream with their pie.

ELZEVR CENTENNIAL PROJECT IS PROGRESSING NICELY

Elzevir township's centennial project, the renovation of the old marble school house at Actinolite, and its conversion into a community hall is progressing nicely. According to Mrs. Muriel Spitzer, chairman of the finance committee, much of the credit must be given to Wm. Credicott, chairman of the planning committee, who has organized the work as well as working hard on the project himself.

Kenneth Smith was one of the investigators of this interesting centennial project, and helped in acquiring the property for Elzevir township. The finance committee is pleased with the donations to date but are hopeful of receiving considerably more in the way of financial assistance.

THIS WEEK AND NEXT

by Ray Argyle

Going, going go --

The battle to succeed John Diefenbaker is under way in earnest among Conservative MPs and provincial premiers following the debacle of the party's annual meeting in Ottawa.

The inevitable leadership convention at which Mr. Diefenbaker's 10-year leadership will be openly challenged will be the scene of some of the bitterest infighting in Canadian political history.

There is no doubt that Mr. Diefenbaker is still determined, as he bluntly told the openly hostile Ottawa assembly, to stand as leader as long as there is no leader who is "prepared to go forward" with the policies he has enunciated the past decade.

What Mr. Diefenbaker was actually telling the party was that in all its 80-odd MPs and several provincial premiers, there was no one capable of replacing him, short of going back to the "dinosaur days of reaction."

Those were the days, the old Chief said, when the Tories opposed old age pensions and family allowances. He has made the party a party of the people, and he was appealing for a mandate to carry on with these policies.

There is much truth, of course, in Mr. Diefenbaker's arguments.

The single-minded purpose of his leadership was to transform the Conservative party from a party of big business influence to a rural-based, Western-dominated party of reform.

This transformation he accomplished, but the tragedy of the Diefenbaker years is that having done this, he was then incapable of presenting to Parliament the legislation needed to bring his dreams to reality.

Despite the inevitability of a PC leadership convention, it is still to early to write off John Diefenbaker's political career.

When the time finally comes that Mr. Diefenbaker is challenged by his would-be successors, his opposition will be split among anywhere from three to six candidates.

Unless Mr. Diefenbaker pulls a sudden reversal of form, bows out and offers the party a hand-picked successor, there is some chance he could win re-election in the face of such divided opposition.

Bearing in mind that his re-election would demoralize loyal Conservatives who feel the party can offer an effective challenge to the Liberals only if Mr. Diefenbaker steps down, his re-election would doubtless be followed by a withering away of the party machinery. None but the most ardent Diefenbaker loyalists would have much heart left to fight the Pearson regime.

Despite this awesome prospect, there is every indication that Mr. Diefenbaker would prefer to lead a rump party, shorn of all opposition, than to bow now to those powers whom he feels would return the Tories to their days of reactionary, big business-oriented policies.

But even as obstinate a man as John Diefenbaker, when finally confronted with the overwhelming evidence that most of his party does not want him, can be expected to ultimately seek refuge in honorable retirement.

What this all means is that while Mr. Diefenbaker stands a chance of winning re-election at the next PC leadership convention, it seems impossible that he would then be able to retain power for very long.

Having demonstrated anew his political abilities, he might then withdraw from the picture and permit the Conservatives to hold a leadership convention without himself as a candidate.

The fateful decision now facing the Conservative party and Mr. Diefenbaker is whether "the Chief" can reconcile himself to the fact that he has lost control of the party, rather than force it through the charade of a convention that could end only in bitter deadlock.

If he can bring himself to this unpleasant decision, there is still a chance that he could not only save the party from tearing itself apart, but could influence the selection of a new leader cast in the Diefenbaker mold. A leader, in other words, who could keep the party on the mildly leftist road charted by Mr. Diefenbaker and save it from returning to the "dinosaur days" of which he has so eloquently warned.

YOUR CAR OF TOMORROW

More innovations may be introduced by the automakers in the next 10 years than appeared in the last 50. Martin Sinclair says in The Financial Post. Congestion in the streets, hazards on the highways, air that becomes more polluted every year — these factors will accelerate the changes. The technology is here now. There are cars with steering wheels only 6 inches in diameter which can be turned with a twist of the wrist — TV screens that do the job of the rearview mirror — "little black boxes" that could route you across Canada by flashing appropriate turn signals on a screen — alert systems that send taped warning messages through a car's radio — and many more safety and convenience items that have matured beyond idea and drawing-board stages. The question is not will they come, The Financial Post says, but when they will come into general use?

COINS

This outline of the history of Canadian coins is brief but contains the essential information for the beginning collector.

After Confederation, it was three years before the name on the coins was changed from the "Province of Canada" to the "Dominion of Canada".

These coins were still not minted in Canada, but were minted in England at the Tower Mint and at Heaton Mint until the year 1908 when the "Royal Canadian Mint" was founded at Ottawa. The coins were now minted at Ottawa but the dies were still made in England and sent to Ottawa for the minting of coinage. Even though we are now minting coins in our own mint, it was not until December 31, 1931, that the complete control of the mint was turned over to the Canadian Government. The mint is now a branch of the Finance Department and is responsible to the Minister of Finance. The complete minting of coins in Canada for Canadians became fulfilled in 1943 when the dies and designs were prepared in Canada.

I have had several letters concerning certain coins with a "Dot" at the bottom of a coin or next to the base

DECEMBER CAMPAIGN ON HOLIDAY HAZARDS

Poison forces across Canada — federal, provincial, municipal — are in the initial stages of their annual December-long campaign to reduce the hazards of the holiday season. Introduced by the Canadian Highway Safety Council's Safe-Driving Week, December 1 to 7, the Holiday Hazards drive leads up to a concentrated attack on the vicious perils of Christmas and New Year's motoring.

The drunk driver, a major menace at any time, becomes the centre of attention during the year-end holiday period. The Council annually joins with the police in urging everyone to participate in the campaign to control this death-dealer. Hosts and hostesses, particularly, have responsibilities in declining to allow holiday guests to over-imbibe or, if they find a guest whose ability to drive is evidently impaired, to drive him home or send him home in a taxi.

The drunk driver can kill himself and others if allowed to proceed. One holiday death in a family ruins that holiday forever, and eliminates joy and celebration in years to come.

of the seven in the five cent piece of 1937.

More 1c, 10c and 25c coins were needed in circulation early in 1937. The dies being prepared for that year's issue were not ready. 1936 dies were used again to strike enough coins for the immediate need and a distinguishing mark placed on them, in this case, a tiny punch mark which would produce a raised "Dot" on the coins. The 25c pieces are scarce but not rare. The 1c and 10c with the dot are extremely rare, four only of each being known. The punch mark on these coins became clogged during the minting and did not register. The 5c piece with the dot is of the regular issue and not valuable unless in extra fine condition.

Don't forget to include a stamped self-addressed envelope if you wish a personal answer. The address is Owen Weaver, Box 253, Madoc, Ontario.

By TRACY S. LUDINGTON

With Expo '67 now well on the way to becoming the greatest show the world has ever seen, directors of the mammoth exhibition can look back to the recent past when there was some scepticism abroad — and they can do it and know that historically speaking they are in good company.

You have only to delve into the pages of "Albert, Prince Consort," a biography by Hector Bolitho, to realize that the jealous, the extremists, and others have always hacked at the pedestal of every great undertaking.

Albert, as the book relates, spent much of his time on The Great Exhibition, and on answering its enemies, for he was perhaps the greatest proponent of the Great Exhibition in Hyde Park in 1851.

Writing his brother, he revealed that extremists in the church thought the plan arrogant, and likely to bring wrath from heaven; manufacturers feared that the British Isles would be flooded with cheap goods; doctors threatened plague and the arrival of hordes of foreigners with scores of different diseases; the London Times abused the Prince for suggesting Hyde Park as the site of the exhibition, and reported that aliens were renting houses to run as brothels and a secret society had been formed to assassinate the Queen.

But, as Albert later wrote, "the gloomy prophets were subdued, the site of Hyde Park was allowed and the world has come to join in the celebration."

And indeed, so it must have seemed — for the Rajah of Travancore had sent an ivory throne, and there were objects of zebra wood, terracotta, majolica and lacquer; jewelled weapons from Madrid, cabinets from Switzerland, chairs hewn from great slabs of coal and from America, Samuel Colt's pistol with the revolving chamber.

And there was a machine for making ice, with the use of sulphuric acid; and a model of a floating church that drifted among the ships on the Delaware river; and a colossal organ, crowned by an eagle that played endless tunes; and a great elm tree grown within the Crystal Palace, constructed especially for the exhibition.

Prince Albert's Great Exhibition of 1851 was a great business success as well. It made an official profit of 186,000 pounds Sterling.

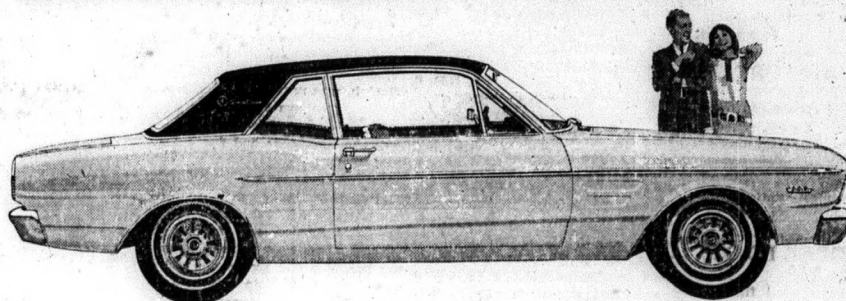

Decision was taken to use the money to encourage the arts and sciences, and 'nourish the British mind'.

To that end were built: The Victoria and Albert Museum; the Science, Natural History, and Geographical Museum; The Imperial College of Science and Technology; the Royal Colleges of Art, Music and Organists; the Royal Meteorological Society, the Entomological Society and others. In 1891, after all this the trustees were able to announce scholarships.

By 1961, 110 years after the Great Exhibition, 960 students from Britain and the Empire, had benefited by these scholarships; 99 became Fellows of the Royal Society; two were past presidents and eight became Nobel laureates.

With this example — no wonder EXPO '67 officials are looking for big things during the April 28 to October 27 period of 1967, Canada's Centennial year, but long after, for it is sincerely believed that a great deal of permanent improvement for 'Man and His World' will be the long-term legacy of the great exhibition now being readied on the largely-man-made islands just off Montreal, in the mighty St. Lawrence River.

Marriage: a tough task

What is the most difficult thing in the world to do? Climb a mountain? Swim Lake Ontario? Get through to a teenager? Face death with poise? Be a real Christian?

Nope. All of these can be done, if you have trained long enough and hard enough to prepare yourself for them; or if you have certain qualities of character.

Hilary climbed Everest. Marilyn Bell swam the lake. They began by climbing small mountains, swimming little lakes.

There are a few recorded cases of adults with great patience and insight getting through to teenagers. But they probably practiced on little teenagers, the 13-year-olds, not yet battle-hardened.

One can face death with poise, if one has learned to face with poise all the little deaths that make up life.

One can even become a good Christian by starting on the little things like generosity and forgiveness and working up to the big hurdles, like humility and love.

The most difficult thing in the world today? To make and maintain a good marriage.

There's no place to train, for one thing. How do you get in shape? You can't start having little marriages in preparation for the big one. At least not around these parts you can't. Although some people try. I know one bird who says he has been happily married three times. All his wives are alive, not to mention kicking.

And it doesn't matter how many fine qualities you have. A veritable saint, of either sex, can have a rotten marriage; and a veritable bum, of either sex, can have a good marriage.

You might be better to read a good book about it, but after 20 years of advancing and retreating in that blood-soaked no-man's-land between husband and wife, I think I have a right to be heard.

There's nothing wrong with marriage itself. It's a venerable institution. And some way will interject here, of course, "So is Kingston Penitentiary." But let's not be cynical.

No it's our modern conception of marriage that's all wrong. We laugh at the Victorians. Prudish stuffed shirts. But they were on the right track. For them, marriage was a serious business, evolved to meet specific needs in their society. For them, romantic love was usually tragic. There are no illusions about marriage in Hardy, Thackeray, Galsworthy.

We are the ones with the illusions. And delusions. For us, marriage is like that cotton candy you buy on the midway. It's whipped together out of hot air and sugar. It's pink and fluffy and you can hardly wait to get your teeth into it. And the first mouthful is sweet, delicious.

But pretty soon it's gone, and you're a little sick, and it's all over your face and in your hair, and you're left with a little roll of gooey paper. That's when marriage really begins.

Well, Mr. Diefenbaker has a favorite saying: "When the going gets tough, the tough get going." And that's what marriage is like. Those who just think they're tough get going and keep right on going. But we really tough ones dig in our heels and stay with it.

And stay and stay and stay. According to all the propaganda from movies, television, and the Ladies Home Journal, marriage is one big, wonderful, miasma of giving and taking, of sharing, of total togetherness.

Oh, those things are there. You give and your wife takes. She's willing to share everything you have, from your bank account to your booze. Not necessarily equal shares, but shares. And togetherness? You'll get total togetherness until you look in the mirror some day, when you're 65, and realize with a shock that you look more like your wife than she does.

But according to us old sweats, marriage is mostly a matter of staying power. Stay out of jail, stay on the job, stay away from other women, stay on the wagon, stay healthy until your pension begins, and stay out of her way when the old lady gets steamed up.

Which I plan to do when mine reads this column.

SNOWMOBILE SAFETY

Snowmobiling is fast becoming one of Ontario's most popular winter sports. The powered snow toboggan, invented about forty years ago to solve the problem of winter isolation in rural and bush areas, has been gradually developed into the sleek, streamlined vehicle of today.

For fast, exhilarating outdoor fun, the vehicle is hard to excel, but the fun depends upon the level-headed thinking of the driver. With the number of enthusiasts expected to increase by leaps and bounds this winter, it is important that the driver become wise in the care and safe handling of his machine. Safety must come first.

Learn the proper way to care for and operate your machine. The rules are laid down in the manual that goes with it. They are not designed to spoil your fun but to help you enjoy the sport without being crippled or killed. Acquire enough knowledge of the mechanics to be able to make minor repairs in an emergency.

Learning how to avoid the hazards may be a bit rough if you learn from personal experience only. Join a snowmobile club or start one among the enthusiasts in your neighbourhood. There may be an expert or two among the group from whom you'll glean valuable knowledge. When accidents happen, even minor ones, obtain the facts and hold a round-table discussion. Point up the unsafe conditions causing the accident. You'll be surprised how expert you'll become at snowmobiling safely without giving up the thrills.

Observe these safety rules. Don't ride with your feet hooked under any part of the machine. Leave yourself free to jump off, if it's necessary. A broken ankle or leg may result if you use a foot as a brake, or a prop to push against the snow if the machine overbalances. Learn how to balance and shift your weight and keep both feet on the machine, preferably on the running boards.

If the machine starts to tip, turn off the motor and let the machine fall. Fall with it. The running board will protect you. Or, turn off the engine and jump clear. Don't "freeze" and hang on to the throttle. If the throttle has frozen open with the cold, stall the motor quickly by pulling the choke.

Avoid hazards. Think twice about jumping hurdles. Get to know the terrain first. Know your limitations. If you hit an unexpected bump, can you hold the machine on course? Keep it balanced? Retain your seat? Broken bones and jarred spines aren't fun.

Avoid a slushy ice surface. This will stop you faster than deep snow. Too many drownings happen among those who use frozen waterways for travel. Check not only the ice thickness before venturing on to it, but find out from local people what part of the ice should be avoided.

A child should not run a machine without supervision. He may be able to drive well but he is not mature enough to recognize impending dangers.

Carry the following emergency equipment in case of a mechanical breakdown. A spark plug, a kit for cleaning plugs, a can of fuel, a drive belt or traction belt, a rope to pull the machine free if wedged between rocks and trees, and other spare parts

The discussion was based on pork cuts and their location on the carcass and suggestions for cooking. Pork hocks and cabbage were cooked in the pressure cooker at this meeting.

The sixth meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Donald Wannamaker. The minutes were read by Debbie Wannamaker. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Leonard Blackburn. The discussion was based necessary. Carry a pair of snowshoes for each passenger. It's a long hike back to a garage if you are in isolated country. Take a first aid kit, an axe, a topographical map of the area, waterproof matches, and a few rations such as chocolate bars, tea, coffee and dehydrated foods, and a small pan to melt snow. If a breakdown occurs on a lake or in a wide open space, a tarp or plastic sheet will afford protection in a storm.

Wear the right type of clothing. Loose clothing and shoe laces, long toques and scarves are dangerous. They are apt to catch in the drive belt and throttle you. Insulated hunting boots are recommended. Open top boots are hazardous. Wear a coverall type of suit with hood made of nylon, or cloth that is snow- and water-repellent; and gauntlet mitts with wool lining. Wear sun goggles to prevent snow blindness, and a mask to protect the face from wind and cold if you are riding for any length of time.

Never travel alone. Use the "buddy" system. Don't ride double on a single place machine.

When leaving machines idle for a considerable length of time, place wood or brush under the track and skis to prevent them from freezing to the snow. After using the machine, clean the track. Tip machine sideways with motor running; then press on the throttle to clear the snow, slush and ice from it. Be sure to stand on the opposite side or you'll get a faceful.

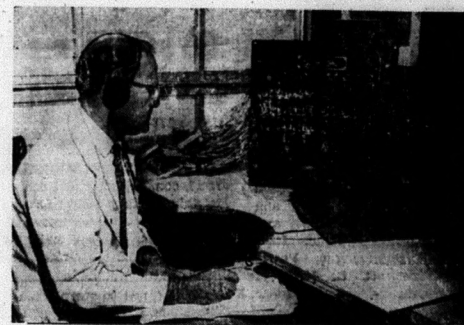

ZONE F3, CAN. LEGION ELECTS ZONE AND DEPUTY COMMANDERS

Twelve branches of the Royal Canadian Legion that comprise Zone F3 met in Wellington on Sunday for the election of a zone and deputy commander. The district includes all branches as far north as Bancroft and Coe Hill and south to Wellington in Prince Edward County.

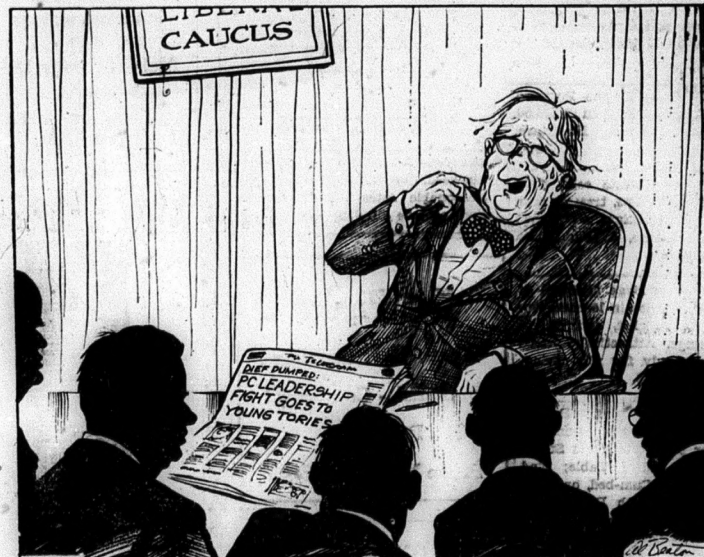

Earl Brant of the Deseronto branch was elected Zone Commander and Oscar Thurston of Tweed, the deputy Zone Commander. At the conclusion of the meeting a social hour and banquet was enjoyed.

After both meetings, the meat that was cooked was enjoyed by all the members.

PROVINCIAL POLICE WEEKLY REPORT

Recently a traffic accident was investigated at a rural intersection involving two cars. Property damage was high with no injuries. One driver freely admitted failing to stop at a stop sign and failed to see the approaching car.

After the debris had been cleaned up and the cars removed, this driver approached the investigating officer and wanted to know how he recovered the damages to his car which was a total wreck. His sole insurance consisted of a receipt from the Motor Vehicle Accident Claims Act. Commission for $20.00. This person honestly thought that this was a receipt for a government sponsored insurance plan.

The Motor Vehicle Accidents Claims Act exists for one reason only — to protect the innocent driver from the uninsured driver.

In this instance we have a person faced with a double problem. First he must replace his own car with little chance of compensation and secondly, stands an excellent chance of being sued by the other driver for damages to his vehicle.

If the uninsured driver neglects to shoulder his responsibilities and fails to pay any judgment issued against him, the M.V.A.C.A. Commission will pay the amount of damages to the innocent driver. However, the M.V.A.C.A. Commission does not like to hand out money needlessly. If arrangements are not made between the defendant and the Commission to pay back the amount of judgement, the Department of Transport will suspend his driver's licence indefinitely until arrangements are made.

Even if the driver pays the judgement out of his own pocket, his driver's licence may be suspended until he files proof of financial responsibility, which would involve purchasing accident insurance which he should have had in the first place.

Thus, the driver who takes his chances and registers under the Motor Vehicle Accident Claims Act may not fare so well. He is liable for the damages to his car and to any other if he is found negligent.

The M.V.A.C.A. receipt is issued for one car, for one year while it is registered to one owner. Any change of ownership means the registration is cancelled and the vehicle must be insured or a new receipt obtained. Any owner operating, or permitting to be operated, any vehicle that is not insured or the uninsured motor vehicle fee is not paid in respect to that vehicle, is guilty of an offense and liable to a fine of not less than $50.00 and not more than $500.00.

It should be noted that in 1967 the cost of registration under the Motor Vehicle Accident Insurance Claims Act will be increased to $25.00.

The Madoc Detachment, Ontario Provincial Police investigated 11 traffic accidents during the past week. Three accidents involved injuries to three persons, none requiring hospitalization.

A total of 21 vehicles were checked, nine warnings issued and eight charges were laid.

Seventeen and one quarter hours were spent in Magistrate's Court which saw 11 convictions registered, nine traffic and two liquor.

Officers, investigating criminal occurrences dealt with 31 items which included four thefts and six disturbances, none of a serious nature.

A total of four hundred and ninety-two man hours were worked in which 5,176 miles of area were patrolled.

CURLING CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

President, Frank Downey; Vice-President, Bob Collier; Secretary, Leona Armstrong. A Curling Committee is to be formed at a later date.

Mixed Curling will be on Sunday night, with the Men's schedule on Monday nights. Ladies Curling will be Monday/ or Tuesday afternoons if there is a Ladies' League.

All Curlers interested in Mixed League should be at the Arena at 7:30 p.m., December 11th. Men's Curling will start the following evening, Monday, Dec. 12th at 7:30 p.m.

In failing health for the past four months, Mrs. Jane Ann Sine, 210 Front Street, Stirling, died Sunday in Belleville General Hospital. She was in her 90th year.

Born in Thurlow she had lived at R.R. 1, Harold for many years prior to moving to Stirling where she had lived with her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Gladys Sine. Her husband was the late Arthur Cornelious Sine. She was a member of St. Paul's United Church in Stirling.

BOXING DAY OBSERVANCE TO VARY WITH PROVINCE

If you go by the dictionary, Boxing Day is the first week day after Christmas. And since Christmas falls on Sunday this year, that would make Monday, December 26, Boxing Day.

But where the old English holiday is observed in Canada, it will be Tuesday, December 27, this time. That's because Monday will be the statutory Christmas Day holiday.

The result is a four-day holiday (Saturday to Tuesday) for many provincial and municipal employees and, in some provinces, for other workers as well.

Exceptions are those who work for the federal government and for the provincial governments in Ontario and Quebec. They get three days — Saturday to Monday.

Quebec just doesn't bother with boxing day. And while it isn't recognized at the provincial level in Ontario, some municipalities are giving their employees the day off.

In most parts of the country, the downtown department stores will be closed Monday and Tuesday to give employees a rest after the Christmas shopping rush which will end with a last-minute flurry Saturday.

BANKS OPEN SATURDAY

Chartered Banks will be open 9 a.m. to noon on the Saturday before Christmas and will be closed Monday and Tuesday. They'll be closed on the Saturday before New Year's Day and on Monday, Jan. 2, a statutory holiday across the country.

A cross-Canada survey by the Canadian Press shows that every province except Ontario and Quebec will observe Boxing Day in some way.

Newfoundland makes it a statutory holiday for provincial and municipal employees. It's a holiday for provincial workers in Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick and most cities and towns are expected to follow suit.

Provincial and Municipal employees in Manitoba and Saskatchewan will also have a four-day holiday and em-

FINAL SESSION
NEXT WEEK FOR HASTINGS COUNCIL

Hastings County Council will hold its final session of the year next week with Warden Clayton Hall calling for the session to get underway on Monday, December 12.

During the session there will be a presentation calling for approval of a joint county health unit with Prince Edward county and the city of Belleville.

Also at the session will be a presentation relating to county welfare with J. G. Anderson of the Ontario Department of Welfare and Grant Harvey, welfare administrator for the county of Prince Edward, scheduled to speak.

Two special committees established at the last session, one to investigate the feasibility of a land titles office and the other the establishment of an ARDA committee, will be reporting.

Employees of some private firms will also get Boxing Day.

Some 15,000 Alberta government employees will get the four-day holiday but 10,000 civic employees in Edmonton will have their four-day period running from Friday, December 23, to Monday, December 26. And some Alberta firms will shut down Friday while others will take Tuesday off.

British Columbia makes Boxing Day a holiday for the whole province. The result is that only federal workers and a few others will be required to work.

FAIR GAME — Despite the fact that a toy poodle is now milady's pampered pet, it was once an old English hunting dog. That animal, carefully trained, sniffed along the ground at night and located strange quarries which put up no fight. Moving in with a shovel, its master bagged them — truffles.

THIS WEEK AND NEXT

by Ray Argyle

Prediction comes true

If there is always a plateau at the end of a steep climb, Canadians could not be blamed (this week for hoping that rising prices may be on the verge of levelling off after a year of steady climb.

A glimmer of hope has been seen through the tangled underbrush of inflation. The Economic Council of Canada says the government should be ready to start pumping up the economy again because a downturn may not be far off.

The forecast seems almost too good to be true.

Last January, I wrote in this column that inflation would be Canada's biggest domestic headache this year. There is little pleasure in seeing such a warning borne out.

In a year of militant unionism, wages went up an average of 12 per cent, while worker productivity rose only six per cent. The famous 30 per cent wage gains of Expo workers, Quebec Hydro and Seaway workers set the target for everyone from postmen to airline mechanics, although not all won such hefty gains.

Corporate profits, meanwhile, rose just as staggeringly. They're up an average of 56 per cent since 1960.

Over the past decade, wage rises have outpaced price gains, although inflation and higher taxes have eaten away up to 50 cents of every dollar gained in pay increases. For those on fixed incomes especially pensioners, real income has fallen.

The Canadian economy has so far been able to withstand these rises only because of continuing rapid industrial expansion. For example, capital spending by business for new plant facilities will reach nearly ten billion dollars this year, an increase of almost 25 per cent over 1965.

All this has created a money shortage. Money, subject like everything else to the law of supply and demand, has become more expensive and that is why the government has had to raise the interest rate on National Housing loans to seven and one-half from the six and three-quarters per cent. This is expected to attract more money to the mortgage field and stimulate lagging housing construction.

Behind the often untranslatable pronouncements of the economists, however, one fundamental fact emerges. It is this:

The main cause of inflation is the willingness of consumers to pay almost any price for almost anything on the market.

That this situation can develop only in time of high prosperity is of course self-evident. It is at such times that the North American price system reasserts the law of supply and demand. Another way of expressing this formula lies in the old adage of "charging all the market will bear." If a $5 item will sell just as readily at $5.50 (and it apparently will these days), then you can be sure the price will not long remain at $5.

The biggest irony of 1966, however, has been that the stock market has been unable to keep pace with fast-rising consumer prices. Values have vanished by the millions in the stock market this year. Prices are down an average of nearly 25 per cent on U.S. and Canadian exchanges, and the markets are probably still some distance away from bottoming out.

The chairman of Canada's Economic Council, John J. Deutsch, is one of the few economists in this country with the ability to discuss economies in terms the public can understand.

Prices are higher here than in the U.S., he said, because inefficient Canadian industry is still able to hide behind tariff walls which keep Canadian prices artificially high. Productivity of Canadian workers runs 20 per cent below the U.S. level, he added, and the pegging of the Canadian dollar at around 82 cents U.S. means that we're paying eight per cent more for our imports.

His conclusions suggest again that there is only one real cure for a Canadian dilemma where wages are lower but prices higher than in the U.S. The cure, of course, is economic union.

FOREST FIRES ON THE INCREASE

A review of the forest fire statistics for Tweed District indicates that the numbers of fires occurring annually have been on the increase during recent years. For example, during the period 1952-1956 there was an average of 74 fires per year, the 1957-61 period had an average of 108 fires and the 1962-66 annual average has increased to 133 fires.

During the 1966 season there were 140 forest fires in the district with 649 acres burned. Ninety-three of the fires started in the late June, July and early August period which was a particularly dry time.

Twenty-nine fires were started by lightning in 1966 and the remaining 111 fires were caused by humans. The Recreational-Resident group of people had an unenviable record of 86 fires, as a result of the thoughtless, careless or negligent use with fire in our woodlands.

There was also the small malicious group of people who started five fires which burned 434 of the 649 total acres burned in the district.

The forest fire danger for the late summer and fall period was much below normal because of the continuing rains. During November there has been 7.29 inches of precipitation as compared to a normal of 2.87 inches.

Diary of a Vagabond by Dorothy Barker

Diminishing Skill

But let me return to my original subject. It is true the country is even now, before our centennial year dawns, being flooded with miniature totem poles, for the most part made in Japan. Perhaps if I relate a little of the history of the totem pole, greater interest will be taken in the argillite totems which are being carved by a few Haida Indians on the Queen Charlotte Isles off the Pacific Coast. This is a hard, slate-like substance, coal black in appearance, which commands a good price in its finished state, but worth every penny because it could become a treasure of considerable value.

Why? Because native carving skills are diminishing among the Haida Tribe. There was a time, even as late as when Emily Carr captured the weird fantasy of totems in her paintings, when hundreds of them stood in west coast Indian villages. It is claimed an Anglican minister, posted to the islands from England, thought the Indians worshipped these carved images and ordered them destroyed.

Between this propaganda and museums all over the world which have sought the best of the remaining totems for their collections, plus mother nature's ravaging weather, few now stand in their original state. It has seemed almost a sacrilege that they have now been allowed to decay, have now been removed from their primitive surroundings or have been allowed to decay. Never a tribute to some heathen god, they were the family trees of the various 'houses' representing tribal clans.

There are magnificent totem pole parks, both in Vancouver and Victoria. Some of the carvings are reproductions, others originals that have been reclaimed. Few still wear the deep red, green, black and yellow colors of native pigments for, in order to preserve them, modern paints have been used. Though continuing the native hues it is sometimes a little startling to watch the glisten of new paint flashing in a Western sunset or dribbling rain off the bright yellow beak of a thunderbird which, almost invariably, surmounts every totem pole.

MOMENT OF REFLECTION. A young mother gives her two children a memorable gift as she takes them to the crest of a snow covered hill and lets them thrill to the wonder of it all. She, too, bathes momentarily in the dazzling beauty of a winter sun in Canada just before darkness, remembering this identical scene many years ago when her mother opened a new world before her young eyes.—TNS Photo

More About Totems

Some weeks ago, I wrote about Mungo Martin, an Indian Chief of a West Coast tribe, the Kwakiutis, who was reputed to be the greatest totem pole carver to have ever chipped a log. It isn't so long ago that I stood beneath a rough wooden shed watching the chips fly as one of his compatriots, whom he had taught the art, was diligently creating the story in wood of a family's history. This was Tony Hunt, son of Henry, a lithe youth of sombre countenance and few words. Actually he didn't have to say too much, for I could see the image taking shape with every blow of his chisel.

The shed stands in the heart of Totem Pole Park in Victoria and the fact that the British Columbia government, better late than never, has recognized the worth of preserving this ancient western Indian art by employing these carvers was, in itself, a fascinating subject to explore. I think possibly because, in my travels, I have too often been subjected to the criticism that Canada has no real native art.

This always raises the hackles of my national pride. In the past I have written about the weaving and silk screening skills of the East Coast Mic Mac tribe, of Eskimo art which, thank goodness, has had one of the best promotional campaigns ever launched in this country; of the craftsmanship of the Cowichan knitters who produce those splendid sweaters of natural wool so dear to the hearts of sportsmen; but not until now have I written about the amazing carving art of the west coast Indians.

SPORTSMEN'S GROUP SETS UP "RECEIVING HOMES" FOR DOGS

Unfortunately, once the dogs used by hunters to chase deer into their rifle sights have accomplished their tasks, many of them became separated.

Too often have we commented on the lack of 'authentic' Canadian souvenirs. I have, in the past, been guilty of just such a statement. Only because of my travels within our own borders have I realized to what extent this is untrue.

Think for a moment of the rug hooking done by the women of Cape Breton, so delicate it usually finds itself decorating walls instead of being used as floor mats. Come a little further west and the sound of looms clicking as shuttles are thrown in the Province of Quebec, makes one realize why tourists travel miles to purchase a genuine ceinture fleche, or a jaunty toque. Once typical adornment for voyageur and French Canadian woodsman, a ceinture fleche is now the prized possession of many skiers, who glide the slopes of the province's popular winter resorts.

ted from their masters, either by accident, or design.

The East-Central Association of Sportsmen's Clubs, comprised of area fish and game club members, has attempted to cope with this problem by setting up temporary dog-holding stations, to accommodate stray hunting dogs at Kaladar, Millbridge, Detlor and Gunter.

Operating with full support and co-operation of the Tweed District office of the Department of Lands and Forests, the kennels handled more than 300 dogs during this year's hunt.

Of these 125 were kept at the Kaladar station alone.

Since the official close of the hunting season 10 days ago, about 70 per cent of the strays have been claimed, and the Association found home for most of the remainder. As of Tuesday all but nine of the dogs had been placed.

Then last week, a Lands and Forests truck transported these nine to the Belleville residence of Harold Crowe who, along with other Quinte Humane Society members, will attempt to place the canine hunters.

Were it not for the combined efforts of the three bodies interested in the welfare of man's best friend, there might, in the foreseeable future, be more dogs than deer at large in the Quinte hunting grounds.

The only time a husband can be sure he's right is when he admits he's wrong.

COINS

(By Owen Weaver)

"What to collect?" is the first question that most beginners ask.

Numismatics is defined as the science of coins and medals. Strictly, a coin is a piece of money marked and issued by government authority but many tokens were used as money in the early days and therefore have a place in collector's sets. Certain ferry and bridge toll checks have been also used as a collection. Where true tokens leave off and others, which technically may have no proper place among them begin, is of little importance.

What is important is that the collector should specialize in those which he or she is most interested and from which the maximum pleasure and satisfaction is derived. The youngster or beginner working on his or her first set of pennies is as earnest and enthusiastic a collector as one who has devoted years of study to this fascinating hobby.

Having decided upon which form the collection shall take it is suggested that it should be carried out systematically rather than collect everything in sight, and if possible, collect only the finest of specimens.

The easiest collection to start is the Canadian one cent collection from 1920 to the present. These small coins can still be found in circulation including the rare 1923 cent which sells for approximately $12 in very good condition. In the last three years I have found three of these coins in change in Madoc plus several others of the same year in the immediate area.

Next week I will describe another collection of Canadian coins that may be found or purchased at reasonable prices and make a nice collection and a good investment.

"What are the rare silver dollars?" this is the most common question to be answered this week. Because the dies of the coins for 1948 were pre-

This resulted in the 1948's being of a very low mintage and demand a high premium. Please let us know if there is any information about coins that you would want printed.

filmed in the summer and early fall of 1966. The item to be seen on December 11 is an interview with W. D. Tipper, the County Agricultural Representative. Many different scenes from around the County will provide the background for this interview. The third and fourth items will not appear until early in 1967.

The following week on December 18 the roll of aircraft in agriculture will be a feature topic.

SANTA CLAUS PARADE A SUCCESS

In spite of the very cold weather, there was a good turnout for Madoc's annual Santa Claus Parade held last Saturday. The parade, sponsored by the Madoc District Chamber of Commerce and merchants of Madoc, was headed by the majorettes from Belleville and the Madoc High School Cadet Band. Besides the floats entered by local merchants and organizations, there were several autos of ancient vintage, clowns, the High School Cheer Leaders and the Campbellford Municipal Band and the Madoc District Band.
Following the parade, over 1,100 bags of candies were given out by Santa and his helpers.

next time
you blow a fuse remember these facts before you blow your top

1 When a fuse blows it is a signal that you have overloaded part of your electrical system ... a circuit.

2 If your home's electrical system is not adequate to serve all your needs you'll notice other symptoms: lights may dim from time to time, your toaster will take longer to toast, and appliances with motors may appear sluggish.

3 If your home is more than 10 years old, the chances are your electrical system requires updating to take care of today's requirements. There are now more than twice the number of appliances used in the home than ten years ago.

SOLUTION

It is not necessary to put up with the inconvenience caused by an out-dated electrical system.

Have your household wiring examined soon. See how easily your home can be modernized electrically.

BENEFITS

1 You can use as many appliances as you wish at the same time ... without giving fuses a second thought.

2 You can add any number of new time-saving appliances to your home.

3 Your appliances will operate more efficiently and with less strain on motors.

4 You can enjoy the convenience of having all the electrical outlets you desire. You will avoid the inconvenience of unsightly extension cords and the attendant risk of overloading the outlet.

5 Additional comforts such as electric heating and air-conditioning can be easily accommodated.

6 Modernizing your wiring system will make an important difference to the safety and resale value of your home. Re-wiring can be handled with little disturbance to your home and at a cost far less than you may think. Contact a qualified electrical contractor, soon. Or call your Hydro.

SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

I had a ball

It's amazing how much a chap can accomplish when he gets off on his own for a day.

With a shave, a clean shirt and a pure heart, a man on his own can see more and do more in 18 hours than a family can in 18 days. Last week end, I reconfirmed this theory, which I have held since I got married.

I had a whole day, a wild and wicked day in the city all by myself. No work; no domestic bliss; not a single crisis to solve for 24 hours.

Last summer, I traveled about 6,000 miles, but I didn't seem to get anywhere. The reason, of course, was that I had along my wife and daughter.

Women complicate things beyond measure, and sometimes almost beyond endurance. In the first place, they never know what they want to do. Before every excursion, there's a two-hour discussion about: what shoes to wear; where to eat; what show to go to; whether we have time for both or should we eat later; how much it's going to cost; what time we should get to bed; and why it will probably be a lousy evening anyway.

Then, at the crucial moment, when it's time to get cracking, and there isn't a minute to lose, they have to shave their legs, or paint their toenails, or change their girdles, or put their hair up or down.

Last summer, I covered more miles pacing up and down hotel rooms, waiting for them, than I did on our transcontinental trip by plane, train and car.

Now, if I'd been taking my wife and/or daughter with me last week end, it would have been about as simple as setting up the United Nations. Write and get tickets for a show or concert. Make elaborate plans for meeting each other for lunch in the city, after our chores were done.

But this time it was different. I tossed a pair of socks and an extra shirt in a bag, and took off with a light heart, but a sober face. The sober face is essential. Everytime I get away from her for a day, my wife fears that I'm going on some Bacchanalian binge.

As a result, I have to lay the groundwork. Serious talk about business conferences, seeing a lawyer, maybe taking in a good show, and getting a good night's sleep in a good, conservative hotel. "Good" is the key word.

And, of course, I always have to do some of these things, or I'd never get away. I had two business meetings, one with a publisher, one with a syndicate man. Both were completely unnecessary, but pleasant, like most business meetings that involve writing.

I skipped the lawyer bit. Not much fun in seeing one's lawyer. Substituted for a smug stroll past the big, phoney Christmas windows of the big department stores, secure in the knowledge there were no wild horses or women around to drag me into the manic interiors.

Somehow, wound up at the Press Club, where an eloquent and learned discussion was taking place about something or other. Joined it. Some time later, discovered it was some time later.

Whizzed up by cab to see college boy son. Not at home, as usual. Now seven o'clock. Time to find a hotel. No rooms anywhere. Bunked into a sordid, old dump I used to stay at in war-time. Cheap.

Picked up hot salami sandwich, ate it on way to theatre. Got a dandy seat, saw a great show, went back to hotel. Ate huge slice of rare beef while watching an entertainer.

Bar closed, entertainer packed up. Not sleepy. Went to coffee house, paid two bucks for half-cup of lousy coffee, enjoyed Irish singer whining about the wrongs of dear old Ireland. Artist wanted to do sketch of me for six dollars, then three dollars, then one dollar. Bought him a coffee and discussed hard life of an artist.

Back to hotel, still not sleepy. No TV in this dump, so watched neon signs, read morning paper, went to bed at 4 a.m. Rose at 9 to rumble of buses, clear-eyed, cleansed of sin and feeling about 69.

Now, how could you do all those things with a couple of women, or even one, trailing along?

REMINISCING

Taken from the Review files of 50 and 15 years ago.

50 YEARS AGO
December 21, 1916

A short recital of Christmas music will be given in St. Peter's Church on Sunday next, after evening service. The organist will be assisted by Miss Pym, Miss Irene Whytock, Lieuts. Thompson and Arthur Whytock.

Mr. Andrew Harper of Vancouver, B.C. is spending a few days at the home of his mother. Like all Westerners, Mr. Harper is very optimistic about the future of B.C. He says they have an almost inexhaustible supply of minerals as yet undeveloped and vast forests of timber.

About the fall suit — its lines will be more or less optional though some designs, of course, will predominate. Three-quarter, half length and occasional hip length coats. Slightly longer skirts that show the fullness pushed toward the back. Louis XV vests of flowered silk, the Moyaen age of influence, coats belted off bellies, military collars, circular jackets, Russian blouses, darts.

Christmas suggestions for mother from Ludbrook Shoe Store — a pair of felt or felt lined boots, a pair of cozy slippers at $5c to $1.25, a pair of cushion sole shoes at $3.75 to $3.95. For sister and brother — hockey boots, $1.25 to $2.25.

For father, a pair of felt lined boots $2.00 to $5.00, bedroom slippers, 80c to $1.15.

A WEEKLY LOOK AT EXPO '67

Any day — for six months in summer '67 — you can see the wonders of 70 countries of the world in Montreal and have the time of your life doing it!

Pausing for a moment to think of it — Montreal is in a most strategic location for the greatest show on earth. It is the world's largest inland seaport, home of the world's two largest transportation corporations, and on the international air map, Montreal is the air-crossroads of the world!

Now, with the opening day of April 28 a half year away, enthusiasm for Expo is mounting at a steadily and rapidly-increasing rate, in the city of Montreal itself, throughout Quebec province generally, and Exophilia is spreading all across this country.

From the outset, and through the preliminary period of gestation, a great deal of the Expo story had to be taken on faith. True, the International Exhibitions Bureau had authorized an Exhibition of the first Category outside of Europe for the very first time — but the very magnitude of the undertaking was too staggering for many to grasp, and the task of developing man-made areas in the mighty St. Lawrence River appeared to some too great to be capable of achievement.

During the first week of October, however, the word was flashed: Expo will be ready on time!

Immediately there was a great upsurge of interest in all parts of Canada, so great an upsurge in fact, that the over-all total in the attendance forecast was upped from 30,000,000 to 35,000,000.

And on the fabulous site, like mushrooms on a spring lawn, the Theme buildings, the Pavilions, bridges, harbors, underground surface-level and overhead transportation systems are springing into view as if by magic, in all their weird and wonderful forms.

Many Canadians visited the Chicago, Seattle and New York Worlds Fairs — but these were largely commercial and not sanctioned by the International Exhibitions Bureau some Canadians visited the Paris and Brussels Exhibitions, but these were in Europe, and travel was a costly business.

Expo '67 is in Canada, Expo '67 is next summer — with Montreal's location and today's modern transportation, Expo '67 is at every Canadian's door-step.

Looking over the long list of fabulous features being prepared for the visitors to Expo, one realizes immediately that superlatives have lost their meaning in the attempt to do justice to a great many of the individual exhibits. Never before has the genius of so many lands been assembled at one place at one time.

A day, a week, even a month would not suffice to see every phase of all exhibits being set up for Montreal's 'greatest show on earth' — but in full realization of this, arrangements have been made so that the visitor may select, and having selected, be freely transported to the land of his or her desires.

Daily there are new news bombshells about Expo — the possibility that U.S. President Johnson will open the American Pavilion, for example — and weekly in this column will be gathered the most titillating of the titbits, so that the man-in-the-street in every Canadian town and city will be kept abreast of the latest and best at Expo as plans are made for a visit to 'the greatest show on earth' that opens April 28, 1967 and continues open until October 27, 1967, seven days a week from 9.00 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. and with the entertainment area open until 2:30 a.m.

TORONTO-DOMINION ASSETS EXCEED $3 BILLION MARK

Toronto-Dominion Bank moved into the $3 billion bank category in its fiscal year ended October 31 last.

In its financial statement, released last week, shows total assets of $3,076 million as at October 31, an increase of $219 million over the previous year.

Healthy increases in earnings, deposits and loans were also reported. Net profit, after taxes, was about 10 per cent higher than in the previous year, amounting to $10,892,656 as compared with $9,914,543 — equivalent to $3.63 a share as against $3.30 a share in 1965.

Provision for income taxes rose by $812,000 to $11,037,000 and $6 million was transferred from undivided profits to Retained Account, bringing the latter to $96 million.

Cash resources at $532 million show an increase of $88 million and are equivalent to 19 per cent of the deposit liabilities. These, together with marketable securities and call loans, equal 44 per cent of liabilities to the public.

Holding of securities at $592 million are up $7 million. Call loans are $12 million lower, amounting to $184 million. Current loans show an increase of $126 million to $1,542 million. Holdings of N.H.A. mortgages at approximately $95 million are at the same level as a year ago.

Total deposits increased by $199 million to $2,839 million. Other deposits, mostly those of business concerns, accounted for $111 million of this increase. Personal savings deposits rose by $62 million to $1,207 million. Deposits by provincial governments jumped $77 million to $126 million whereas those by "other banks" dropped $52 million to $122 million.

Investment in bank premises at $21 million is $10 millions lower than in 1965. This reflects the transfer of additional bank properties to the bank's wholly-owned subsidiary, Toronto-Dominion Realty Co. Limited. Assets of the realty company as at October 31 totalled $35 million, an increase in the year of approximately $17 million.

The two-day cheese makers' convention was said most successful with attendance being well up over that of recent years.

The meeting was closed by Mrs. Spear with thoughts on "The Meaning of Christmas" and prayer.

FORMER MADOC CLERGYMAN RETIRES

The Anglican Church of Canada has lost one of its "land marks" to the United States, November 30.

And Ontario Diocese will bear the brunt of that loss.

Rev. Hope Swayne has prepared his last sermon, ending more than 40 years in the ministry, all of it in the Kingston area diocese.

He conducted his farewell service recently in St. Mark's Anglican Church, Barriefield, where he has been rector for the last 11 years.

Rev. Mr. Swayne has served many parishes in his 10 years in the diocese.

Ordained a deacon by Bishop Bidwell at St. George's Cathedral in 1926 in Kingston, he was immediately appointed to Marysburg where he stayed for two years. For the next two years he served as assistant curate at St. George's Anglican Church in Toronto.

A two-year appointment to the mission of Bannockburn near Madoc ended in 1932 with his appointment to Tweed where he served for seven years. In 1939 he was inducted as rector of Merrickville and Burritt's Rapids where he was until 1943.

He then moved to Picton as rector of St. Mary Magdalene Anglican Church for 12 years. Then came his appointment to St. Mark's at Barriefield in 1955. At this time he was also in charge of St. James in Pittsburgh but resigned this charge last year. He will take up residence shortly in Norristown, Pa.

AMATEUR PARTICIPATION AT EXPO '67

Expo 67 announced the selection of 42 amateur entertainment groups from across Canada. This brings to 292 the number of Canadian groups already chosen for its Bandshell Festival next year.

The panel of independent judges commented on the interest shown in the Festival by bands, dance groups, choirs and the like. Expo's Special Attractions Division, however, reports growing response from folk-rock and jazz groups and anticipates that selections at the next panel meeting will reflect this.

Among the Ontario groups to participate is the North Hastings High School Band of Bancroft.

DEAR DORIS advice from Doris Clark

Driving me "buggy"

DEAR DORIS — I am 13, and have taken music lessons for six years. My mother insists I continue taking them even though I can now play anything I want. But the man from whom I am taking them drives me "buggy".

He runs his fingers through my hair during my lesson, smokes a stupid cigar steadily, and kneels down beside me while I'm playing and holds my arm. And he's so old he almost creaks!

I told Mom what he does but she doesn't seem to understand. I want to quit and the rest of the family, who have also heard what he does, don't blame me in the least for wanting to. I'm getting so I hate the piano and anything that has to do with it.

Going Bugs

DEAR GOING — Mom sees the old gent as harmless; you as a cute little girl, about the same as you were six years ago. But I can't see you learning much from a teacher who drives you up the wall with his familiarities.

Fact is, you are becoming a young lady. As such, you would be entirely within your rights to stop playing when he touches you. Turn and face him, and tell him to please not touch you at all; that it distracts you. Good practice for putting the boys in their place later on.

DEAR DORIS — I have a husband who is a Mommy's boy. I don't know what to do about it. My mother-in-law phones us about a half a dozen times a day and my husband tells her everything that goes on in our home, and even in our bed room.

Last week she drove past at midnight, saw a light on, so she phoned us to say goodnight. My husband didn't mind because I was in bed and so were the children.

Can't Stand It

DEAR CANT — If my leaf-let persuades you to talk it out with Mommy's boy, it will have done its work. He needs to know you consider your private lives really private; and that the apron strings have been replaced by a wedding band.

As long as Mommy keeps Son and Family as her main hobby, she won't be finding another life for herself.

DEAR DORIS — Our boarders have failed to pay me the money owing for board and room. We are coming closer and closer to losing our home.

One boarder says he owes me nothing, whereas he owes me 60 dollars. Another one owes me 100 dollars. Still another ran up a board and room bill of 150 dollars, joined the army and we have not heard from him for over a year.

There should be a law to deal with such offenders. Can I write to the army and collect the 150 dollars by garnisheeing the soldier's pay?

We are deaf mutes. We have always treated them with kindness and consideration. I am so broken up over all this thieving on their part.

Deaf Mutes

DEAR DEAF MUTES — This is the sort of thing that makes me see red. It is definitely stealing. Write to the army headquarters in Ottawa, by all means.

More important is to get legal guidance about business-like arrangements with boarders. No board bill should be allowed to pile up to such proportions — a poor response to kind treatment!

The welfare or family agency in your area is the place to go for counselling and for direction to whatever inexpensive legal aid is available where you are.

TWEED-MADOC TWINS WIN AND LOSE

(by Don Bailey)

TWINS SLAUGHTER WELLINGTON

Tweed-Madoc Twins returned from Wellington last Friday night leaving in their wake an angry Wellington Junior Hockey team with a 7-3 defeat.

Harold Bailey scored three goals, his second being the winner. Gene Francis netted one goal and picked up one assist, Chris Brown, Ab Reid, and Gord Donaldson had one goal each. Jerry Chapman picked up two assists while singles went to Ken Smith, Barry Pyear, Terry Chapman, Doug Geen, Joe McInroy and John Rowe.

John Rowe is a new name to the Twins as are Fred Free and Jim Peeling who also played Friday night. These boys were picked up from Campbellford after they folded two weeks ago. They are a valuable asset to our team as proved by Friday's score. Chris Brown is also able to play for us now that Campbellford is folded.

TWINS LOSE TO GANANOQUE
Gananoque Islanders came out the victors on Sunday when they defeated the Madoc-Tweed Twins 9-6 in a rough, scrappy game at Gananoque.

The Islanders seemed to be carrying a chip on their shoulders all thro' the game and they turned, ready to fight on every check. Near the end of the third period, however, the chip was knocked off in a scramble behind the Twins net and a grand fight began. The officials were forced to call the game at the 17:44 mark and order the offending players from the ice. The remainder made up for it with sheepish grins and a round of handshakes.

Jerry Chapman finally came out of a scoring slump and into his true form as he fired two goals and picked up an assist for the Twins. Chris Brown, Barry Pyear, Allan Rivers and Ken Smith were the other Twins' scorers with assists going to Gord Donaldson, Ken Smith, Ab Reid, Garry Brooks and Chris Brown.

SHOOT THE PUCK

This year, at last, at all Twins' home games in Madoc, we will be drawing an admission ticket number and offering the holder of that ticket a shot on goal.

The shot will be made at a hole in a plywood board placed in front of

THREE WOMEN ON TWEED COUNCIL

The much talked of election in Tweed is now past history. Elected previously by acclamation were Mrs. Allan, reeve, and Mrs. Ted Courneyea, councillor. Elected yesterday to fill three council seats were Burton Thompson 477, Mrs. Bosley 467 and Rev. D. W. Sinclair 455.

Defeated were Mrs. Geo. Sinclair with 284 votes, Mrs. Robt. Thompson 95, and Mrs. R. Whitfield 154.

70 per cent of the electors voted.

PENSION CHEQUES WON'T BE EARLY

Health Minister MacEachen told the Commons Monday that old age pension cheques will arrive on schedule sometime after Christmas and not before.

Replying to Alfred Hales (PC - Wellington South) Mr. MacEachen said he considered a suggestion that the cheques be mailed earlier for Christmas but rejected it as not being in the best interests of most pensioners.

The extra week's gap in receiving the January cheque made the suggestion not feasible, he said.

DEAR DORIS

advice from
Doris Clark

Success story

DEAR DORIS — There is a blind 14-year-old girl in Vancouver who has learned to play the piano by listening to a tape recorder and memorizing every piece. Then she picks it out on the piano.

Her teacher says she has perfect pitch. She adores music. What's more, she is serious about this interest and practises long hours. She even won first prize at the Kiwanis Music Festival, where she was the best of 13 contestants in the Bach piano-forte class for children under 15.

Just thought this story might encourage other handicapped children — and even some not handicapped — to stick with their practising, whether it be piano, voice, dancing or whatever.

Sadie Bending
Editor, CCB Outlook

DEAR SADIE — A fine story, and thank you! Our readers will be delighted to hear about your girl. Personally, I find the tremendous activity of a certain blind editor quite inspiring.

The Canadian Council of the Blind is lucky to have a vital, capable person like yourself turning out its Canada-wide magazine.

DEAR DORIS — This past summer I met a young physiotherapist recently arrived from India. We became good friends and often met for lunch or coffee. Now that I am back at school we write to each other.

In one of my letters was a suggestion that he come here to one of our school plays.

He accepted. I doubt that he will be here more than four hours — probably less time than it will take him to drive the 120 miles in our winter weather.

I have considered his staying at our home for the week end instead of driving back the same night. While my family has no objection whatsoever, the plain fact is that we also have no room whatsoever!

(1) If he does say that he will stay overnight in the city, should my parents reserve and pay for his room?

(2) If yes, what would be the correct procedure for the following day? I know of places we could visit but in the case of places where there is a fee for entrance, who would pay? Maisie

DEAR MAISIE — The highways are good, and you may find the night drive back won't throw him. But—

(1) It would be friendly hospitality to a guest of Canada to suggest and provide an overnight stay.

(2) Then if he takes you sight-seeing, he'll want to pay any admissions.

DEAR DORIS — Please tell me how to deal with neighbors who have been borrowing constantly for a long time. These articles include everything from a lawn mower to any electrical appliances we have.

The lawn mower has really taken a hard beating. May add we are not able to buy these articles again.

Fed Up

DEAR FED UP — Dagwood and Herb usually fight it out; but it isn't funny in real life. Comes a time when seasoned borrowers need reminding about other people's rights.

You could:

(1) Give them a taste of their own medicine. Take a look in their kitchen for a choice electric grill to appropriate for a while.

(2) Apologize profusely when they ask for something, explaining that it needs repair, or that you are just about to use it yourself, or that it is on guarantee and cannot be loaned; or

(3) Take them your latest appliance repair bill and suggest they share the cost.

One neighbor I know returns one kindness with another; never paying back the borrowed sugar but offering her own kind of honey or homemade bread. Maybe yours only need a hint about this. Do they read this column?

Confidential to Still Hoping: Can't say from here whether or not he's the marrying kind. I'd suspect he's not. Yet at 50 you might think twice before popping the question. If the answer is "No" you might thus forfeit your present good times.

Male companionship is precious to an unattached career girl at any age.

TORONTO TV STATION
SEEKS SATELLITE FOR AREA

Toronto television station CFTO (Channel 9) has asked the support of Belleville city council in its application to the Board of Broadcast Governors, for a licence to establish a satellite repeater station in the Belleville area.

Station representative, E.J. Deaneley said his organizations application was already on file with the BBG but said there could be a channel switch which would leave channel 6 open for this area.

If so, and if the government would grant the licence, Mr. Deaneley said CFTO would be prepared to construct a full power station in the Belleville area.

At the same time Mr. Deaneley said that if a suitable local group made application for a TV station at Belleville, his firm would be prepared to withdraw its application.

He said that a local station could serve the area better than would a satellite station.

Council took no action on the request by CFTO for support of its application but named a special committee of Aldermen - Douglas Boyle and Enos David along with Mayor Jack Ellis to make further investigation and report to council.

During a question period, Mr. Deaneley said a satellite station would offer only reprints of programs broadcast from Toronto. There will be no local programming.

On the other hand, a local group establishing an independent station would be able to offer local programming, but Mr. Deaneley said there would be little chance of such a group being able to carry either CBC or CTV network programs.

TREE OR TORCH?

Canada's list of fire tragedies is enlarged each Christmas season by a frightening number of preventable mishaps. The National Safety League of Canada claims these disasters could be avoided by a simple set of precautions.

First, the League warns, a dry Christmas tree is an invitation to disaster. In fact, a tree that becomes dry enough, if exposed to flame, will explode. Make certain, NSL says, the tree is fresh when purchased, then stand it in water and keep the water replenished. Dispose of the tree as soon as possible after the holiday.

If the tree is metallic, take great care with decorations, particularly electrical ones, for a power leak could burn or kill anyone who touched the tree. The League advises using off-tree flood or spot lighting instead of lights on a metal tree.

For all lights, warns the League, inspect the cord regularly and replace worn ones. New strings of lights should carry the Canadian Standards Association approval label. Turn lights off at night and when leaving the house even for a short time.

Precautions are easy. Recovering from the loss of a home or a member of the family through carelessness is all but impossible.

BUY THE TOY
FOR THE CHILD

"Don't buy a toy that you would like; buy it for the child," cautions the National Safety League of Canada.

The League pointed out that buying Christmas toys should not be a haphazard operation. Rather, consider the child it will go to. Gay McLaren, NSL's General Manager, said, for example, that a child too young to know the dangers of a chemistry set should not be given one. "You may find your roof and your child in orbit," he warned. Toys for infants should not have sharp edges or pieces that could be swallowed.

Mr. McLaren cautioned, "Don't let last-minute Christmas shopping force you into buying any old toy without regard for possible dangers. Select every purchase with care and base it on suitability and value. Guard a child's Christmas pleasure with a safety measure."

STAFF MEMBER AWARDED EMO PIN

Gordon Fraser, Radio Operator for the Department of Lands and Forests, Tweed, was recently awarded an emergency measures organization service pin.

Mr. Fraser is EMO Communication Officer for Tweed and Hungerford municipalities. He was one of three persons to win this award in the Belleville-Tweed area in recent years.

The pin was presented by Mayor Jack Ellis of Belleville, Chairman of the Quinte Area Emergency Committee.

HAZZARD'S U.C.W.

A meditation on the Shepherds' Psalm created the atmosphere at the December meeting of Hazzard's United Church Women, held in the church on Thursday evening. Mrs. Harold Harris, in shepherd's robes, was the narrator with Mrs. David Franks making the responses. White Gifts were presented with the offering and dedicated by Mrs. H. Harris.

In the candlelighted church a carol service composed the programme with each carol being preceded by an interesting story of its origin. A lovely solo, "Silent Night", was sung by Mrs. Ross Moorcroft, who also presided at the piano for the singing of the carols. Others taking active parts in the programme were, Mrs. Ron Devolin, Mrs. John Devolin, Mrs. W. M. Sedgwick, Mrs. Mervil Lees. At the close of this very impressive service, arranged by Miss M. Moorcroft, members and guests alike were invited to the vestry for a social time.

Candles, pine and coloured Christmas balls centred the tea table where Mrs. Allan Franks poured tea while the hostesses served lunch.

While making a medical call in an unfamiliar part of town, the doctor checked the house number but unknowingly he had the wrong street. The woman who answered the door looked at his black bag and said, "Well, you've come to the wrong house, but come in anyway, I feel LOUSY!"

CONSERVATION AUTHORITY QUESTIONS FURTHER PURCHASES

The Moira River Conservation Authority is in a position that is possibly unique in Ontario.

At a time when many other Authorities across the province are wondering how they can afford to add to their acreage the Moira Authority is beginning to wonder if maybe it should start cutting back on its land purchases.

The question was asked last week by Chairman James Sprackett at an executive meeting of the Authority at Cannifton.

Noting that the authority now had close to 15,000 acres of reforestation property, Mr. Sprackett asked how long the present rate of purchase should continue. He said the authority properties were beginning to cost considerable in municipal taxes.

"I don't mean that we should stop purchasing altogether, but maybe we should slow down a bit," he said.

Bill Hiscock, representing the lands and forests department at Tweed which has a forest management agreement with the authority, told the meeting that approximately 1,000 acres of property had been added this year, bringing the total to 14,456 acres.

More than 2,000,000 trees have been planted on authority property and another 100,000 are expected to be added next year.

Reports on the year's activities were heard from the various advisory board chairmen. Thomas Armstrong reported for the conservation area board; T. C. Graham for education; James Spry for forestry; Graham Bell for water control and W. Armstrong for fish and wild life.

Mr. Bell told the meeting that more money was needed for additional water control measures on the watershed noting that several existing dams were in need of repair.

He referred to the $11,000 spent this fall in the repair of a wing wall at Lingham Lake dam north of Madoc and said that eventually the main dam would have to be strengthened.

Pending approval of an authority brief asking for 90 per cent ARDA grants on major water control projects, Mr. Bell said that no big projects were planned on the Moira next year.

However, land would be purchased as a site for a proposed dam at Deerpark Lake near the junction of Partidge Creek and the Skootamatta River. Money would also be provided for dam engineering fees.

Construction of the Deerpark Lake dam would not start until the ARDA program was cleared.

The authority fill regulation committee will, in the future, include the municipal representative or representatives from the municipality from which the fill application is received.

The make-up of this committee was changed following a protest from the city of Belleville where objection was raised to fill placed in the river by Ben Safe at the rear of his property on Station Street.

Belleville Alderman, Donald Joss, one of two Belleville appointees to the authority, said the city's objection to present river fill regulations was not that it wanted to add red tape to the procedure.

NEW CENTENNIAL MEDALLIONS BEING PRODUCED

Ontario's new Centennial medallions — one nickel silver, the other, gold-plated — are being produced by Wellings Manufacturing Company Limited, Toronto — the only privately owned mint in Canada with the facilities to produce medallions in quantity.

Owned and operated by Fred Rohde, a highly-skilled mint master with four generations of private minting experience to his credit, the Wellings firm is currently in the process of turning out the initial run of 100,000 nickel-silver medallions (priced at $1.00 each) and 10,000 gold-plated units (priced at $2.00 each), both of the same design. Gift sets in special boxes containing the two items are being offered at $3.50.

A special alloy — formulated with the aid of Douglas Modle, Director of the Laboratory Branch, Ontario Department of Mines — is being used in the manufacturing process. The alloy consists of platinum, gold, silver, copper, nickel, zinc and iron.

One side of the medallion, depicting a modern-day miner, commemorates the role mining has played in the development of Canada since 1867 when mining in the province began in real earnest. The other side shows the Ontario coat of arms and commemorates the centenary of Confederation.

EITHER HUSBAND OR WIFE MAY PAY HOSPITAL INSURANCE

Beginning in January 1967, a change in Ontario Hospital Services Commission Regulations will permit either the husband or wife to pay the family hospital insurance premiums through a group. Up to this time, if both husband and wife were employed in insured groups, the Regulations required the husband to pay for the family as he is usually the one more continually employed.

The relaxing of this Regulation will provide a means of overcoming certain difficulties which previously arose for some residents. In some cases, a family was unable to obtain supplementary coverage for semi-private accommodation because the husband's employer did not deduct the additional premiums for Blue Cross or CUMBA, whereas the wife's employer would have done so. (Blue Cross and CUMBA semi-private coverage is sold by these insurers under special arrangement with the Commission as part of a package with Ontario Hospital Insurance.) Also, in some instances, the family could not benefit from the fact that only the wife's employer paid part or all of the premium cost.

If the husband is employed in construction or some other industry,

REDUCED RATES FOR CANADA-U.S. LONG DISTANCE CALLS

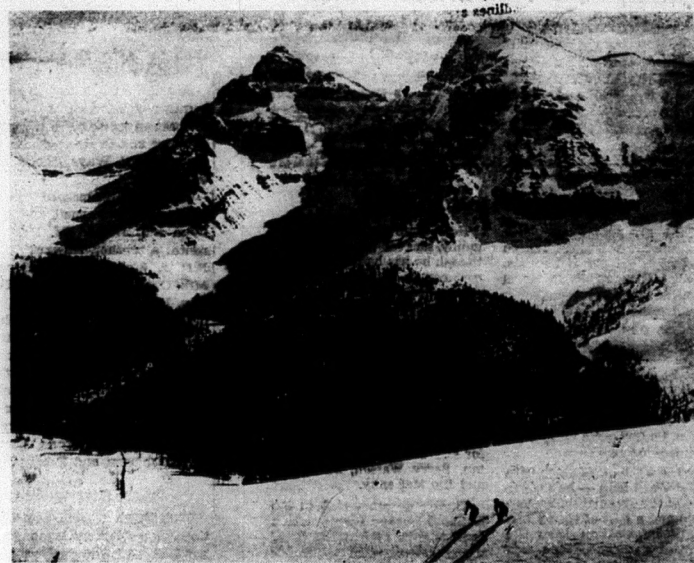

A Canadian - U.S. telephone industry proposal to reduce rates on long distance calling between the two countries was announced this week by the Bell Telephone Company of Canada.

The proposed reductions will begin at distances of over 900 miles between Canadian and U.S. points. The most substantial savings will apply to station-to-station calls made at night and on Sunday.

It is expected the new rate schedule will be effective on January 15.

where employees move frequently from one job to another, it is often more convenient if the wife can pay through her group, thus overcoming the need for the husband to transfer the insurance from one employer to another.

Although the new Regulation provides a means of overcoming inequities, whether or not a company shares in the cost of Ontario Hospital Insurance premiums for any or all of its employees is something outside the Commission's jurisdiction. The amended Regulation simply removes the obligation that the husband remit for the family through his group.

FEELING OF FREEDOM. To a Canadian skier there is nothing which can compare to skimming the slopes during the winter months with the beauty of nature and the wonder of mountains and hills all around. Already thousands of skiers have been testing the many runs across the country. These two skiers are thrilling to the "feeling of freedom" just outside Banff, Alta.—TNS Photo.

THE SPORTS BEAT

By Glen May

One of those days

There are some days when deadlines are almost impossible to meet, even for columnists. Today is one of those times when the mind is a mite cloudy and ideas don't develop quickly.

Sitting and staring out a wide window at smog, fast cars, frozen snow and large neon signs doesn't help much. Looking around the office for a touch of inspiration isn't working. Idle chats with other staffers and a few more minutes of staring also scores zero.

Maybe a nibble at lunch with the boss will help — he's usually good for stimulating conversation and a host of timely tidbits of information from the realm of sportdom. Nope, this time he's carrying on about some scientific stuff.

Oh well, back to the window and more inspirational thoughts.

Good, there's the phone. Could it be one of my agents with a white hot item? No such luck. Some character calling the wrong department. He asked for the morgue and it took a few minutes to explain he had mis-dialed. Hmmmm. Come to think of it he might have been right, judging from the tomblike silence of the typewriters around here today.

Wow, it's almost two o'clock and still no column. Somebody's going to be offering me as a burnt sacrifice if I don't click the keys in a hurry. In fact, I'm about 459 seconds away from deadline.

Okay, here goes.

The Toronto Maple Leafs will win the Stanley Cup defeating the Montreal Canadiens in five games. Toronto has the best balance of any club in the circuit with the Habs skating a close second.

Another mark of excellence for manager-coach Punch Imlach's book is his cunning selection of young players to blend with his established pensioners.

He's come up with quite a gunny sack of fresh talent, although he has had to suffer the past couple of schedules while it was spawned in the lower echelons of the minors. Now his "kids" are through with the formula feeding and are ready for a regular steak diet.

Punch has Brian Conacher, Jim Pappin, Larry Jeffrey, Pete Stelmowski and John Brenneman as first stringers. Standing by eagerly in the wings, ready for star billing, are Mike Walton, Barry Watson, Brit Selby and Jim McKenny.

There's no other club in the National Hockey League which can boast of such a supply of superb talent. Each player has at least 10 hockey seasons ahead of him. About the only other NHL club which comes close in this category is the Boston Bruins, and they have too many mediocre veterans helping the youngsters to make them a definite threat this year.

Imlach has masterminded an excellent rebuilding program, especially with the expansion draft coming up after the season when the NHL expands from six to 12 teams. He has brought up the top talent in his farm system and is now relying on the new clubs to stay away from his veterans during the draft, hoping they feel his Stanley, Hortons, Armstrongs and Kellies are too old to serve any real purpose for the gigantic building task the new entries must accomplish.

Yikes! I've only got about 27 seconds left before deadline and I need another paragraph.

Think, man, think. It's not working and now I'm down to 11 seconds. I knew it, here comes the boss. Can't that guy ever be late once? Er, yessir, it's finished, well almost. But sir, please don't tear it out of my typewr.....

MADOC HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

The November meeting of the Madoc Home and School Association was held on Monday, November 28. The meeting was opened by the singing of "O Canada".

The reports of the Secretary and Treasurer were submitted and accepted. Roll Call was taken and the attendance banner was once again awarded to Miss Wright's Grade one class. Tentative plans were made for a skate exchange for a future date.

Mrs. Mary Pigden introduced as the guest speaker, local lawyer, Mr. Bruce White.

As his topic, Mr. White chose "Wills — How and why to make one". Such terms as Surrogate court, probating a will, duties of administrator or executor, succession duties and many others were explained. After this informative address, a very active question and answer period followed. More points of interest were raised and explained at length and to the satisfaction of all. It was very obvious to all present that the topic chosen and the manner with which it was handled were both interesting and pleasing to all.

Mr. White was capably thanked by Mr. Bill Aylesworth.

The meeting closed with the singing of "The Queen".

DR. RICHARD POTTER WINS P. C. NOMINATION

A Belleville doctor defeated two other candidates at Trenton High School Monday night to win the nomination to represent the Conservatives in the Quinte riding at the next provincial election.

Dr. Richard T. Potter, 51, defeated Belleville Mayor Jack Ellis and school board chairman MacDonald Smith on the first ballot.

Over 600 people crowded into the auditorium. Of the 335 delegates invited to the meeting, all but one attended and cast their vote.

After hearing of his nomination, Dr. Potter said he felt humble because of the confidence the meeting had placed in him.

"I appreciate the sacrifices which will have to be made," he said. "These have all been discussed carefully with my wife and family before my decision was made."

"This is just the beginning. Now we must get out and work and work hard for the party to put the Progressive Conservatives in Queen's Park to represent this new Quinte Riding."

Mayor Ellis and Mr. Smith both pledged their loyalty and called for the meeting to offer Dr. Potter its full support.

PROVINCIAL POLICE WEEKLY REPORT

Officers assigned to criminal detail investigated 32 occurrences during the past week. These included four reports of thefts and two breaking and entering.

Five youths are now awaiting trial at the Belleville County Jail following the theft of a number of articles from Austin Mayer's residence of Sulphide, Ontario. One of these youths also faces several charges for the breaking and entering of the Sulphide General Store.

A number of cottages on the south shore of Crowe Lake have been reported broken into. If any person has seen any suspicious vehicle or persons in this area, any assistance would be appreciated and any information received would be considered confidential.

Mrs. Anne Jenkins died as a result of burns suffered in a barn fire at her residence in Rawdon Twp.

Of the nine traffic accidents investigated, three resulted in injury to four persons, none serious. Forty-five vehicles were checked during the week, twenty-three warnings issued and seventeen charges laid.

Fifteen convictions were registered in Magistrate's Court, 13 for traffic, one for liquor and one criminal.

Total duty hours numbered 505 with 4,355 miles of area roads patrolled.

Several days of cold and slippery weather were experienced about one week ago, and it soon became evident that a number of drivers must mend their ways if they are going to survive the winter.

Even to the casual observer, the long careening skid marks on the highways indicated that some people have to winterize their driving as well as their cars. The best winter safety rule is — "SLOW DOWN."

Mrs. Fred Moorcroft of Madoc was Hostess to the Cooper members of the U.C.W. on Wednesday afternoon last week.

Mr. James Rollins has been visiting his son Mr. Ivan Rollins and family at London.

Ross Bailey was home from Kemptonville over the weekend.

THREE REEVES SEEK SPOT AS WARDEN OF HASTINGS

The Hastings County Wardenship for 1967 will be a three-way fight.

This was indicated Wednesday when three candidates made election pitches at a noon luncheon attended by county councillors.

In the running are Sidney Reeve, Ernest Kells, Reeve William Shannon of Marmora Village, and Dunganahon township Reeve, Calvin White.

It's 40 years since a county Warden was named for Marmora Village. The last warden from that municipality was the late G. B. Airhart in 1926. The last warden from Dunganahon was John J. Churcher in 1940. Harleigh Hamilton of Sidney was warden in 1961.

Five of this year's county council will not be back next year. They are Warden Clayton Mall, Thomas Armstrong of Deloro, Clayton McMurray of Elzevir and Grimsthorpe, Guy Hughes of Tweed, and J. Morgan, deputy reeve from Rawdon.

New faces at the January session will be Horace Casey, deputy reeve of Thurlow; Charles Gordanier of Deloro, Kenneth Smith of Elzevir, Mrs. Barbara Allen from Tweed, and Maurice Clancy, the new Rawdon deputy reeve. The warden will be picked at that time.

County Winners Centennial Farmstead Improvement Competition

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson and son of Moira are the winners of the high score and also most improvement shown in Farm Barns and barnyard in the Centennial Farmstead Improvement Contest, with the reserve going to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Heath of R.R. 1, Stirling. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Sills, Roslin, with the best Farmstead entry and a tie on the most improvements in barnyard with Ross Ketcheson of Moira. The best Farmstead approach was won by Mr. and Mrs. Ridley E. Wallbridge and Sons of R.R. 3, Belleville. The most improvement in House yard by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Clements of Harold. The most improvement in farm house going to Mr. and Mrs. Basil Kuglin of Foxboro. Honourable recognition going to Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Forestell of Madoc and Henigan Rush, Stoco.

Certificates of merit from Department of Agriculture and Food were presented to all competitors in the County by Miss Jayne Gay and checks to the winners presented by Mr. Ralph Banbury, who judged the competition.

Presiding at the meeting and banquet was Mr. Orono Sharp and the meeting was held in conjunction with the County Farm Safety Council.

Mr. Ralph Banbury was the guest speaker and, in his address, stressed how much appreciation we should give our forefathers who cleared the forest and established the many fine farms in Hastings County. Every farm family should be proud of their home, but it should be made pleasant and attractive. It should be painted with flowers and shrubs on the lawn.

The driveway should be arranged, that the most convenient place for a visitor to park his car, was near the path to the front door and it should have the appearance of being used. Modern conveniences are necessary in the home.

A vote of thanks to the guest speaker was given by Mr. Ben Blecker of Halloway.

Report of the Farm Safety Council area meeting in Peterborough was given by W. Forestell.

Mr. Ridley E. Wallbridge of Belleville was elected President of Hastings Farm Safety Council for 1967, with Mr. W. D. Tipper as secretary-treasurer. Mr. and Mrs. Wallbridge and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson were appointed as delegates to the Provincial Conference in Guelph in February.

We miss that light, and ever will, Her vacant place there's none can fill,

Down here we grieve, but not in vain, For up in heaven we will meet again.

OUR HIGH SCHOOL

Now that the exams are over and the papers marked, here we come again to give a little account of what is happening with us at school. Let's finish with the exams right off by saying that all Christmas reports will be given out before the holidays. We have seen some very fine marks, while others... have led earnest students to say they are going to catch up in the holidays on notes and work they have missed.

Night school classes met on Tuesday for the last time in '66! They will re-open on Tuesday, January 10th.

Last week's assembly was on Tourism - one of the most important industries in Ontario. One student in every ten will likely be engaged in some form of tourism after graduation! People - not food, accommodation, scenery - make a holiday enjoyable. We should develop a true sense of hospitality and treat the visitor as someone from our own home. A friendly smile goes a long way. We should know our local lore and the beauty spots in this area. So said Miss Mary MacInnis from the Department of Travel and Tourism, Toronto.

Monday was Dress-up Day at school, for pictures were being taken of teams, classes, clubs and so on for the yearbook. How fine everyone looked - so clean and neat and well-dressed - and proud of their appearance. In fact one teacher told us, it was hard to distinguish between some of the senior boys and the younger teachers! Maybe we should have Dress-up days often, say, once a month. Meantime, on ordinary days, one can still look very, very well if clean, neat well-brushed and hair shining with care.

Remember what a cold, wet, thoroughly unpleasant day last Saturday was? Our band with Mr. DeLange and Mr. Fawcett went to Campbellford to play in the Santa Claus parade there. In spite of the inclement weather, they did very well. They did get warmed up on the return bus trip, we hear. It seems that the band is making a name for itself locally, for it had to refuse invitations to play in Bancroft and in Tweed for their S.C. parades. We are looking forward to hearing the North Hastings Orchestra from Bancroft in a special assembly here on Wednesday afternoon. This orchestra has about 50 members.

The CHFS Cadet Band and the boys who turned out for our Remembrance Day parade are being given a free trip by bus to Toronto this Saturday. There they will visit the New Armouries and the Royal Ont. Museum. Messrs. DeLange, Fawcett and Porter will be accompanying the boys. Should be a very pleasant day.

And the cadets have another treat in store in the New Year - January tenth to be exact. Mr. Weaver is arranging for a trip to Toronto to see the Canadians play against the Russians. It sounds like a wonderful opportunity. Imagine seeing hockey players from far away Russia!

Again looking ahead in the New Year - possibly March - we plan to have a Drama Night, when three one-act plays will be presented. These will be directed by Messrs. Ritter, Candon, Wilson and Orr. Already a preliminary meeting has been held and plays have been ordered. The casting of characters will begin soon after the plays arrive. More of this later.

BOYS' SPORTS

Min Mah reports that on last Friday the Madoc Bantams travelled with Mr. Bateman and Mr. Sprackett to Belleville Collegiate Institute to play an exhibition basketball game. Both teams played well but the B.C.I. Bantams were more experienced and they defeated us 49-20. Scorers for Madoc were Min Mah with six points, and Fred O'Riordan with six points.

At this time the Boys' Bantam, Junior and Senior basketball teams are being organized. The first league games are to be played Dec. 16th.

The Boys' Athletic Association has been organized but as yet little has been done.

Curling teams are being formed and as far as I know they are mixed teams. We need more curlers, so support the league.

GIRLS' SPORTS

The following is a list of the girls who were nominated to represent their form on the Girls' Athletic Association:

9A—Jean Morrison; 9B—Roxanna Keller; 9C—Lynne Hachey; 9G—Phoebe Young; 10A—Beth Price; 10B—Charlotte Armstrong; 10C—Dorothy Lees; 10G—Linda Greene; 11A—Carol Kincaid; 11B—Brenda Jeffrey; 11C—Judy Irwin; 12A—Diane McIntyre; 12B—Cheryl Graham; 12 Spec.—Bonnie Smith.

Last week marked the beginning of the girls' basketball season. There were try-outs for both Junior and Senior. The scheduled games begin in January and we are hoping for two victorious teams.

Our CHRISTMAS DANCE and the last dance of the year is being held this Friday night with Michael Paul and the Endees of Napanee providing the music. Chairman Jim Haggerty tells us that the gym will be decorated in the Christmas motif and there will be a door prize and spot dance prizes. Later in the evening old Santa himself will look in on the dancers. Don't miss the fun.

No one can miss seeing the lovely tree inside the main door. This was donated by Mr. McNab and set up by the Occupations boys. Then it was beautifully decorated by Mrs. Fleming and the Occupations girls.

There is special activity in the Home Economics Department these days. Each class is preparing for its own Coffee Party during the last week of school. They are planning suitable Christmas decorations and a tea-table. The rest of the school is being tantalized by the spicy aroma of Christmas baking which is wafted out when Door 211 is opened.

Now we should like to tell you a little about the Occupations Work Experience Programme which has just completed its first two-week session. This was for the students of 10F and 10G. There will be a second two-week session before Easter. This is arranged by Mr. Doug Graham, the Director, in conjunction with the Occupations teachers, Mrs. Empey, Mrs. Fleming and Mr. Timlin. Mr. Graham tries to place the students in their own areas of Stirling, Tweed, Marmora or Madoc and their work day corresponds in length with the school day. During the two-week period the four teachers mentioned above called several times on the students as they were working to ensure that all was going as planned.

At the close of the period, the employers filled in a Work Experience Questionnaire on the student under the headings of punctuality, personal appearance, initiative, dependability, honesty, ability to follow instructions, attitude toward employer or supervisor, ability to work without supervision, conduct, maturity, and suggestions. These questionnaires are kept on file for future reference. They add valuable information to the concept the student is building for himself in the classroom. Each employer assessed "this" student, to help him correct his faults. We should add that many employers were surprised that the girls and boys worked much better than they had expected.

To get first hand impressions, we contacted Mrs. Kelly of the Madoc Nursing Home and asked how she felt about the scheme. Mrs. Kelly thinks it is a very good idea and helps the student a great deal. In fact she is so much in favour that she is looking forward to having a second student in March. Her student, Elsie Walker, arrived punctually and did a good job, whether it was making beds, setting tables, carrying trays, helping in the kitchen or laundry. Her neat appearance and quiet manner soon made her well-liked in the Home.

"I wish there had been something like this when I was in school," was like this when I was in school," was one of the comments made by Mr. Barry Hunter of Tweed Vener. "The student gains valuable experience. He learns what to expect in a working situation." His student was Monte Kleinstuber, who soon gained confidence as he helped around the plant. Mr. Hunter arranged that Monte would be doing something different each day in his position as helper. In this factory the worker acquires skills unique in the Vener industry. This is the second time Mr. Hunter has taken a student into his plant.

As we talked further of this Work Experience Programme, Mr. Graham pointed out that students with good standing in their school programme may apply for early leaving school (i.e. after the Easter recess) provided they have obtained full-time employment. Some of the students who gave good satisfaction have already been told that there will be a job for them next summer, if they care to apply.

HASTINGS COUNTY FEDERATION OF AGRIC. ANNUAL BANQUET

The Annual Banquet of Hastings County Federation of Agriculture was held Tuesday evening, November 22, in Carmel Jubilee Church Hall when the local United Church Women catered for a roast beef banquet with all the trimmings.

The tables were decorated with artificial flowers and the place mats centred around "Knowing Your Beef" and were the compliments of Hastings and Prince Edward Beef Improvement Association.

The programmes carried the theme, "Not For Ourselves Alone" and the slogan, "Luck is when preparation and opportunity meet." During the evening, the door prize was given for a specially marked programme and the presentation was made by Allan McDonnell of a safety helmet to Mr. Ernest Kells, of Sidney Township.

Rev. W. C. Cox, of Rawdon charge, said Grace and Mrs. Harry Brown was pianist for the Queen, followed by a toast to Her Majesty.

Charles H. Fargey, Stirling, President of the Federation, welcomed the 150 guests in attendance. Wilfrid Forestell, Secretary, introduced the head table, also various other guests in the audience. The head table guests were: Charles Huffman, Immediate Past President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and Mrs. Huffman; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fargey; Mr. and Mrs. Griffin Ketcheson, Foxboro; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Wood, Prince Edward; Mr. and Mrs. Allan McDonnell; Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Cox and Mr. and Mrs. W. Forestell.

The entertainment consisted of a humorous duet, in costume, by Janice and Valerie Clancy, of Wellman's.

Later we talked with Gary White, 10F, and Kathy Gray, 10G, and learned that both were well pleased with their work experience. Kathy spent her two weeks in the Beamish store, where she helped mark prices, unpack goods, and arrange goods for sale. At first, Mr. McLeod, the manager, had her help at various counters, then she was put on the Candy Counter for the second week. She got along so well that she will be working in the store from school closing until Christmas. Kathy found the work experience very useful and recommends it highly.

"It gives one a good idea of what will be required when you go out to work on your own," stated Gary, who spent two weeks with Ken Ray of Stirling Machine Shop. This shop handles farm machinery - sales and servicing. Gary found that his work in welding at school helped him as he worked on some machine parts. He now knows more about welding. "Such experience in a shop shows the value of the welding course in school," he added. Gary had the further experience of going out to a farm to assist in making repairs to a manure spreader. All in all, he found his experience very interesting and very satisfying.

Here is a list of the business firms which participated in the program, together with the visiting student:

MADOC—Devolin's Grocery—J. Ash; Madoc Cash and Carry—J. Cosbey; Hagerman's Radiator Shop—T. Brown; Derry's Garage—T. Fluke; Beamish Store—K. Gray; I.G.A.—L. Greene; Getha's Beauty Shop—J. Young; Madoc Nursing Home—E. Walker; Ed Hyde Sunoco Service—J. Donnan; Ed Kramp Superette—H. Wilson; Ted Hailstone—J. Dopking; Pigden's Garage—L. Reid.

MARMORA—Ember's Restaurant—W. Ellis; Stirling Motors—E. Danford; I.G.A.—J. Jackson; Drummond Lumber—A. Yeoman.

TWEED—Crest Hardware (Tweed)—C. Luffman; I.G.A.—C. Palmateer; Tweed Vener—M. Kleinstuber; Rashotte Lumber—D. Whiteman; Sawyer Stoll—M. Prevost; G. Prevost; Town & Country Beauty Shop—D. Cassibo.

STIRLING—I.G.A.—L. Land; Stirling Machine Shop—G. White.

"Bicycle Built for Two," and a second selection "Sweetest Lullaby," with their mother, Mrs. Gerald Clancy as accompanist.

St. Paul's Male Quartet, Messrs. Harry Brown, Jack Bush, Grant Richardson and Ralph Johnson, sang two selections, with Mrs. Brown as accompanist.

Deputy Reeve John Morgan welcomed the group to Rawdon Township.

Griffin Ketcheson, Foxboro, a member of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture, introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Charles Huffman, as follows:

"Mr. Huffman is a resident of Harrow, Ontario, the most southern town in Canada, in the County of Essex. He and his son, Carl, operate a dairy, fruit and vegetable farm and they specialize in peaches, potatoes, sweet corn, tobacco, and a greenhouse establishment. Mr. and Mrs. Huffman have two daughters and one son, Carl, who now manages the farming operation.

Mr. Huffman has always been active in farm and co-operative organizations. He is now the Immediate Past President of the O.F.A., is 1st Vice-President of the Co-op Insurance, a director of the United Co-operative of Toronto and an executive member of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture."

In his opening remarks, Mr. Huffman voiced appreciative thanks to the committee for their invitation to the banquet. Just recently he attended a very interesting meeting of The World Organization and he felt sure that there will no longer be a world surplus of food. He stressed that there are many conditions in the world today that will have to be dealt with in coming years. While Agriculture is taking advantage of mechanization and research, still it is going to be necessary to produce more food for the years ahead.

It has been suggested that Agriculture must have a set policy and in order to achieve that phase of our work, every member of the O.F.A. will need to have a clear understanding of the policy of our organization in order to improve the living conditions of our agricultural people. The Federation was formed to provide a voice for Agriculture and to assist in good management. Today, it is impossible to assess the value of this organization and what it has accomplished down through the years.

The speaker compared prices from today's of World War Two and also those of 1964-65, which showed that the people engaged in agricultural pursuits have been producing food without adequate returns.

The Farm Marketing Board works with the various processors to enable extra dollars to be placed in the farmers' pockets.

Mr. Huffman gave a very informative outline of the value of the various Co-operatives across the province such as the C.I.A. Co-operative Insurance Company and The Medical Co-op.

The Federation of Agriculture has refused to affiliate with any political party as they prefer to remain an organization of its own.

1966 is a year of change and it will go down in history as being the first year that it was a recognized fact that the farmer was not receiving enough for his produce. We should not think in terms that the consumer is the enemy of the farmer. In today's world the housewife should purchase staple foods and not splurge on the articles done up in fancy packages.

In closing, Mr. Huffman said: "A well-managed and a well-operated farm is still a very necessary way of life. If it is given good leadership, then the farm will be a success. Remember you don't get anything in this world unless you work for it and you must always be prepared to sacrifice a little for your organization."

Harold Harris, Second Vice-President, voiced appreciative thanks to the speaker and made the presentation of a Hastings County chequer cheese.

Mrs. C. Fargey spoke briefly and presented Mrs. Huffman with a gift as a memento of her visit to Rawdon Township. Both of the recipients voiced grateful thanks.

Robert Burkitt expressed thanks to the members of Carmel United Church Women for the cuisine and Mrs. Douglas Pyear replied.

George Carlisle read a tribute to the late Roy Sills, of Halloway, who was elected president in January, 1966, and served until his death. For many years he had been a very valuable member of the Federation. Mr. Carlisle read an appropriate poem, followed by a period of silence.

Brief messages of greetings were given by Dan Cayley, Victoria County, Fieldman for O.F.A.; Bruce Taylor, Durham County, Board of Governors O.F.A.; Mrs. Kenneth Wood, Prince Edward County, President of Zone 5; Phil Phlagler, C.J.B.Q. Radio Station, Belleville; Peter McKinnon, Bath, Ontario, Chairman of the Ontario Wheat Board, who recently was awarded the Bank of Montreal Scholarship for World Travel. (There were 750 applicants and 50 were accepted); Carl Bateman, Belleville, representing Hastings County; Gerald Roy, Belleville, C.I.A. Insurance; Larry Bertrand, Marmora, Assistant at the Agricultural Office, Stirling; John Wilkes, Chairman of the Agricultural Committee for Hastings County; Ernest Kells, Reeve of Sidney; Goldie McInroy, Reeve of Huntingdon; Les Rawlings, Manager of the Bank of Montreal, Stirling.

Wilfrid Forestell, R.R. 3, Madoc, Secretary, announced an executive meeting to be held on Thursday evening, December 8th, in Stirling when plans will be arranged for the annual meeting in January, 1967.

SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

No Expo For Me

We've been talking about it for a long time. It would mean a major upheaval in the family. But it's two against one, and this is a democracy. Unless, of course, your wife happens to constitute the minority.

Today I applied for an exchange teaching job, for one year, in the United Kingdom. I must be out of my mind, but I did.

Daughter Kim is all for it. With the adventurous spirit of the young, and their complete lack of participation in all the work involved, she glows at the prospect.

After all, England is the land of the Beatles, the Rolling Stones and the highest miniskirts.

England, as the song says, swings like a pendulum do. That's for Kimbo.

She'd like nothing better than to spend a year abroad. Not acquiring a broad education. Never! She looks upon education as small boys do upon washing: the squarest and most useless thing foisted on the young by stupid, loving parents.

No, what she'd like to pick up in England is a Carnaby st. wardrobe and a Liverpool accent, so that she could knock the local kids dead when she comes home. The "mod" look of Carnaby is bad enough, but the dialect of the Liverpudlian is surely the ugliest in the world, outside the pure Hotten-tot.

What she doesn't picture, and I haven't the heart to tell her, is the truth. If she deal goes through, a year from now she'll be wading through the fog in Little Muddling, or climbing the cliffs on the Isle of Mull, complete with rubber boots, raincoat and sou'wester, approximately 3,000 social miles from the England and London's West End.

My wife blows hot and cold. One week, when things are particularly obnoxious around here, she's fairly keen. She sees a snug cottage, with vines and a cozy fireplace, shining brass, and an English garden out back. She envisages a jaunt into London every week end, for piano lessons, concerts, lunch, and the theatre.

The next week, she's been talking to someone who has just spent a year there and was half-frozen for 12 months. Or she says flatly, "If you think I'm going to leave my comfortable home, treasured piano students, and all my friends, to go and live in some cold, clammy dump among a lot of strangers, etc. etc."

Sometimes, she wavers, and asks me what England is really like. The trouble is, I haven't been there for over 20 years. About all I can do is describe some first-rate pubs, and tell her how easy it was to lose your girl in the fog or blackout, unless you clung to her. Somehow, these descriptive gems don't fan her ardor for the trip.

As I said, no one in his right mind wants to spend a year in the U.K. I know I'll come home either riddled with rheumatism, or in a wooden box with a sheen of fog on it.

And it isn't sentiment. Admittedly, there are a few old pubs I'd like to re-visit. But they've probably changed into raucous road-houses that serve martinis instead of half-and-half, and the waitresses are insolent pups instead of buxom barmaids who called you "Luv", or "Ducks".

And there are a few old girlfriends I'd like to re-visit. But a friend of mine did this last year, taking his wife along. Somehow, he said, there was a lack of rapport. And they were all so old. And, even worse, they thought he was old.

And I sure as heck don't want to go and stand on some deserted, dilapidated air-drome and think of the old days. Old runways are for the birds, who make much better landings on them than I ever did.

No, what sparks my desire to go away for a year is none of these. It is the thought of spending the whole of Centennial Year in Canada.

Now, I love this land. But the idea of an entire year of having Expo rammed down my throat, of watching municipalities solemnly snip the ribbon at such sparkling centennial projects as the new public lavatories, or the new parking lot, makes me want to throw up.

And what better place to do that than the U.K., where I must admit I have done it before, on a number of occasions, after an evening of warm pints of bitters.

Diary of a Vagabond by Dorothy Barker

Relating to Railway Relics

If only there were more weeks in a year I could have long ago written about my visit in 1964 with Major C. Warren Anderson. Approaching his home in Sussex, New Brunswick, I had no idea that the bungalow surrounded by beds of abundantly flowering shrubs and annuals held one of the most interesting collections of railroad memorabilia outside any museum.

Last week I was reminded of my notes on the pleasant afternoon I spent browsing among his treasures when I read a headline "CN looking For Museum Relics". Someday, perhaps, the Major may donate his collection to a museum for posterity, but when I interviewed him, his basement repository was as precious to him as a child. Parting with even a single item, he said, would be like giving away one's offspring.

Major Anderson, like all small boys, wanted to be a policeman when he grew up. Instead, in 1915, he started work with the Canadian National Railway. During his employment with the company, he took a correspondence course relating to steam boilers and air brakes and finally ended up in the parts department. During the second world war he was a quartermaster in messing and catering in the army and never did get back to railroading. But it was his original love, expressed in later life by his never ending search for items for his collection.

I couldn't begin to detail the fascinating relics, many of them absolutely priceless. He has 2,200 pictures alone, relating to events in Canadian railroading. There is every part exhibited from the front of a locomotive to its tender and there are train passes dating from 1857 to the present.

While Major Anderson's collection is both unique in content and historical fact, there is a community in Ontario which thought enough of its past history to purchase a former CN station for a museum. Opened in May, it contains the historical data of Collingwood in its many displays including those of marine and pioneer interest.

In 1855 Collingwood was the Northern terminus of the Northern Railway, the first line to operate west of Montreal. It was known then as Hen-and-Chicken Harbour.

The railway display has a picture of Fred Capreol who promoted a railway from Toronto through the north and to the west, and for whom the town of Capreol was named.

An old-fashioned ticket agent in his cage advertises a Grand Trunk Railway excursion to the Pan American Exposition at Buffalo, New York, dated October 4, 1901. The ticket cost $2.70 for return fare from Collingwood to Buffalo, good for four days with a stopover at Niagara Falls.

In Search of Items
Articles of interest are being collected throughout the CN system and will be given, or put on permanent loan, to the National Museum of Canada.

In the attics and basements of employees or retired personnel there may be items that could add interest to this section of our National Museum. What are they?

Something from an old station — a clock, station stamp, even an old notice. Anything from an old passenger or business car, or a car used by distinguished public servants, to a caboose or a work car. Or you might have a piece of unusual office equipment or clothing that was a trademark of railroading in bygone days.

The railway is also on the outlook for old tools used in the maintenance of way, construction or shop work, as well as lighting of all types, safety devices, level crossing equipment and examples of other engineering developments.

These are difficult days for automobile manufacturers: they are thinking up ways to make their products safer and at the same time giving them new names to make them sound more dangerous.

CENTENNIAL BADGES FOR POSTAL EMPLOYEES

Canada's postal employees are going to participate in next year's Centennial celebrations by voluntarily wearing badges bearing the Centennial symbol. The over 12,000 Letter Carriers and 4,000 Wicket Clerks are being requested to display the symbols on their uniforms throughout 1967.

At a recent ceremony in Hull, P.Q., Postmaster General, Jean-Pierre Cote and Secretary of State, Judy LaMarsh presided at an official presentation of the badges to Post Office employees. The Hull Carriers and Clerks are the first to wear the gold-coloured symbols; those at other offices across Canada will follow suit in the new year.

In his remarks to the employees, Mr. Cote explained the significance of the symbol, which is gold on a navy background. The badges are a joint project of the Canada Post Office and the Centennial Commission to publicize this country's one hundredth birthday. They will be worn on the right sleeve of uniforms of Letter Carriers and on the breast pocket of uniforms of Wicket Clerks.

Mrs. LaMarsh was representing the Centennial Commission which is under her jurisdiction and which made the badges available.

MINISTER OF LANDS AND FORESTS VISITS TWEED

The Honourable Rene Brunelle, newly appointed Minister of Lands and Forests, succeeding the Honourable Kelso Roberts, Q.C., visited the Tweed District Office on Tuesday, December 6.

A luncheon given in his honour was held at the Tweedsmuir Hotel at noon on Tuesday, with all members of the Department of Lands and Forests Tweed District Office staff in attendance.

Reeve Guy Hughes and Clyde Bell, Editor of Tweed News, attended the luncheon as guests of the Department of Lands and Forests.

Accompanying the Honourable Minister on his tour of South-Eastern Ontario was J. M. Taylor, Regional Forester, Kingston; Nelson McMahon, Executive Officer, Toronto; and Frank McCabe, Toronto.

After a two hour meeting with supervisory staff at Tweed District Office, the Honourable Minister and his party departed for Lindsay where he will meet with Department of Lands and Forests staff there.

FOUR WOMEN 2 MEN CONTEST TWEED ELECTION

The women are at it again!

Wednesday night with four of them sharing a municipal nomination slate with eight men — and some of them tardy about their intentions of running a local election campaign — Tweed Village seemed to have lost a chance for an all woman council.

Now they're all in there fighting — and only two of the males are contesting their right for election.

Last week the four qualified to seek election and join their sister villagers — acclaimed reeve Mrs. Barbara Allen and acclaimed councillor Mrs. E. G. Courneyea — as the 1967 village council.

The quartet are: Mrs. Amelia Bosley, Mrs. Sandra Thompson, Mrs. George Sinclair and Mrs. Jeannette Whitfield.

Their out-numbered male opponents are Rev. Donald Sinclair, an Anglican clergyman and currently a councillor; and former councillor, Burton L. Thompson.

The election is December 15.

Canada's Annual Safe-Driving week is over for another year. By stressing defensive driving techniques during this week, the Canadian Highway Safety Council, hoped to make motorists aware of every known safe driving procedure so that they will better remember and practise them for the other 51 weeks of the year. We at Bell Canada — at least all of us who drive our own cars on business or the familiar green vehicles — well know the importance of driving defensively. All of us who do any driving as part of our work at Bell Canada must take and pass a pretty rugged Company course even though we have provincial driving permits. And, in recent years this course has stressed defensive driving. Really, defensive driving is little more than common sense. It means learning how to recognize potentially dangerous situations, learning how to avoid them, then putting this knowledge to use. Since 42% of the people surveyed in connection with The Canadian Driver's Test television program some time back failed the test, it seems that few people know where danger lurks. With winter setting in with its snowstorms, sleet, ice, and sub-zero temperatures, defensive driving becomes more important than ever. Driver Improvement courses have been held in many parts of the country this year and more are planned for the months to come. Driving conditions have changed drastically since many of us received our first permits, and a fresh look at our driving habits could make motor-ing safer and more enjoyable on our crowded streets and highways. And, it could make for a happier holiday season, when so many people will be travelling to join families and friends for Christmas and New Years celebrations.

On Christmas day, 35 years ago, telephone lines carried the first radio broadcast of a complete opera — Hansel and Gretel — It was transmitted coast-to-coast from the Metropolitan Opera House in New York

A senseless argument

Parliament can be a drag sometimes, and perhaps this is why some MPs leap so readily on whatever juicy tidbit which comes along to distract the House of Commons from the business of the country.

Could one be blamed for reaching this conclusion after the latest performance in the House over CBC-TV shows?

Otherwise responsible Parliamentarians who called so loudly for censorship of the "Sunday" program following the showing of a harmless and rather amusing bit of sex on film from Britain, included some who hadn't even seen the program. David Fulton of Kamloops, who still harbors dreams of heading up the Conservative party when the current Dump Dief drive succeeds, got in his small contribution by charging the CBC with abusing its editorial freedom by purveying "garbage".

Eric Winkler of Grey-Bruce said he hadn't seen the show, but that the time had come that "the Canadian taxpayer need no longer pay for this sort of trash."

And Mr. Diefenbaker, who always manages to make things seem worse than they are, called for the Government to look into the possibility of laying criminal charges against those responsible for this "lewdness and pornography."

It has been evident for some time now that this country's political leadership does not represent the views of most Canadians.

At the same time, one cannot but respect the concern of those Canadians who in a time of shifting moral standards, are genuinely worried over what they regard as a general breakdown in public morality.

But Parliamentarians who sit in an assembly which a few months ago engaged in cheap snickering over the Gerda Munzinger episode, hardly qualify as defenders of Canadian virtue.

The main difference, it seems to me, in the morality of the 1960s and of, say, the 1930s is to be found in honesty and not behavior. It would appear behavior has changed very little, but people are today much more honest about their behavior.

This explanation will never of course satisfy those who regard sex as dirty. To them, all public discussion of sex must also be dirty. Or garbage? Or trash? Or lewd and pornographic?

The lame-duck president of the CBC, Alphonse Ouimet (he will shortly retire) says the showing of the sex film was a mistake. "Sunday" producer Daryl Duke says his program is in "stronger and better shape than I had dared hope."

In a way, "Sunday" is just what the country — and the CBC — deserves for having gotten rid of Seven Days, a literate and exciting public affairs show which may never again be matched for incisive fact-finding and investigative reporting.

As a successor to Seven Days, "Sunday" has thus been disappointing in its coverage of Canadian news. As an example, the program before the one featuring the sex film didn't have a single good Canadian news story. There was an insipid interview with the former Marina Oswald, a stupid conversation with the acquitted Cleveland doctor, Sam Shepard, and a second-hand film on mental therapy from a Los Angeles television station.

The history of Seven Days, when linked to the almost unbelievable ferocious reaction of some MPs to the "Sunday" sex film, all add to the depressingly familiar Canadian reaction of horror and shock to anything which smacks slightly of moral honesty.

The previous part of all this is that this attitude is not, I believe, shared by most Canadians.

Why else does Canada continue to cling to one of the world's cruelest divorce laws? Why then do we every year condemn thousands of Canadian women to illegal abortions? Why are there no laws setting out safety standards in auto manufacturing?

Is it not time that Canadians told their lawmakers: Get with it — your facade of upright morality only cloaks a meanness and an immorality that belongs to a less civilized age?

DUNGANNON TWP. TO GET CENTENNIAL GRANT FOR BEACH

$1,274.00 by the Township of Dungannon; $1,113.00 by the Province and non; $1,113.00 by the Province, and $1,113.00 by the Government of Canada.

The announcement was made this week by Clarke T. Rollins.

ROD WEBB SPEAKS ON TRANSFER OF ENGLISH SPEAKING OPERATORS

The following is the text of a Speech made by Rod Webb, M. P. in the House of Commons on November 25th and copied from Hansard.

Mr. R. A. Webb: Mr. Speaker, on Friday last I received a reply to a question that I asked regarding the removal of English speaking telephone operators in government departments. The minister said that he knew of no such action but would look into the matter. As of this date we have received no reply. I believe this matter was again brought to the minister's attention this week at a Liberal caucus.

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I believe the estimates of my department are to be considered as soon as we reach the orders of the day. If the hon. gentleman will repeat his question then, I will be glad to deal with it at that time.

Mr. Webb: Mr. Chairman, I should like to repeat my question to the minister of Transport which I put to him last Friday and which is recorded on page 10047 of Hansard in regard to the removal of English speaking telephone operators in the government employ. The Minister of Transport replied that he knew of no such action but would look into the matter. I have not received a reply since then.

Mr. Chairman, I should like to associate myself with the hon. member for Prince Edward-Lennox who last night pointed out in the house so ably that the Canadian people are wondering just what is going on in the country today and what is the objective of the Liberal government. Today in Canada 67 per cent of the population is English speaking, whether of English or ethnic origin, and one by one they are being removed from the service of the government. The people of Canada are fed up with this state of affairs. It is time we were informed of the objective of this government, and of their action in this respect.

Mr. Pickersgill: Mr. Chairman, I would like to reply to the hon. gentleman at once by saying that these are not civil servants but employees of the Bell Telephone Company. We have told the company that every employee of the government switchboard must be English speaking. If they cannot answer the telephone in English, they cannot be employed.

We think that since there are two official languages in this country, it is right that any one who places a call through the government switchboard should receive a reply in that language as well. I think this is only fair. All this means is that we want operators who can answer the telephone in either of the two languages. They may be born in Poland, they may be born in Saskatchewan or they may be born in China, but it is a requirement that they be able to answer simple questions in both official languages. If we are going to have a united country, it seems to me we can ask for no less.

Mr. Webb: I want to be as fair about this as I can, Mr. Chairman, but we are living in the province of Ontario, and a check of 9,000 telephone calls, made by us revealed that 7,221 were answered in French. We are still living in Ontario, in this part of Canada. What is the reason for this?

Mr. Pickersgill: If the hon. member will bring to my notice a single instance that he knows of himself, or that anyone else knows of, where somebody has telephoned the government switchboard and has found that the operator cannot answer in English, I shall take the matter up at once with as much indignation as he shows. It is absolutely imperative that every operator on the government switchboard be able to answer in English I shall take the matter up at once with as much indignation as he shows. It is equally important that those who wish to speak in the other official language be answered in the other official language, without having to have a second operator searched for. Because of this, employees not qualified are simply being transferred from the government switchboard to the Bell Telephone Company to other employment at the same remuneration, and no injustice is involved in this.

I think it is elementary justice, if you are to have two official languages in this country, that a person can telephone the government switchboard, make his request in either official language, and receive a prompt reply.

Mr. Webb: I do not want anyone to think that the sentiment that I express comes from this side of the house only. The minister is well aware of what happened in his own caucus this week, and I want him to keep that in mind.

MUST PASS EXAM

Starting January 1 anyone applying for a licence to ride a motorcycle in Ontario will be required to pass an examination on its operation, Transport Minister, Irwin Haskett announced this week.

"He will be issued a driver's licence endorsed for the operation of motorcycles only," Mr. Haskett told a news conference. At present, anyone holding a motor vehicle driver's licence can operate a motorcycle.

EARLY RECREATION

Lacrosse, a fast-moving netted stick game, was played in America. Originated by the Iroquois Indians and used as a training requirement for warriors, this strenuous game was adopted in 1840 by the white man. It is now reputed to be north America's oldest organized sport.

NAPANEE TAKES TWO FROM TWINS

(By Don Bailey)

Napanee Red Wings downed the Tweed-Madoc Twins 5-2 last Wednesday night in Napanee. The Twins were thrown off by the hard-hitting of the Red Wings and were unable to complete many good rushes.

Jerry Chapman picked up a goal and an assist, as did Al Rivers. Gene Francis also assisted on Al's goal. Back in Madoc on Friday night, the game was much more even. The Twins changed their strategy to match the hard-hitting of the Red Wings and it paid off in goals. Napanee won out, however, in the closing minutes of the game with three quick goals to make a 10-6 tally.

Gord Donaldson picked up a goal and an assist in the game as did Al Rivers. Jerry Chapman netted two goals and picked up one assist while Barry Pyear fired one goal and assisted on two. Ken Smith scored once with assists going to Garry Brooks and Chris Brown.

The Twins have been handicapped on the last two starts with captain-forward Harold Bailey out with an ankle injury and defenseman Doug Geen out sick. Jim Peeling was also out sick for Friday night's game.

SHOOT THE PUCK

None responded to Friday night's draw for the shot on goal, so the pot for December 21 will be $10.00.

Winner of a turkey donated by Devolin's Grocery in Madoc was Karen Francis of White Lake.

Wednesday night, in addition to the shot on goal, is a draw for two turkey dinners, courtesy of Richard's Restaurant. Winner will be announced in next week's issue.

Friday night in Tweed Gananoque Islanders visit the Tweed-Madoc Twins. This game has been designated Young Canada Night. From the admission tickets of children under 12 will be made on draw. If the winning ticket holder is a girl, she receives a pair of figure skates. If it is a boy, he gets one week free at the Tom O'Shanter hockey school in Toronto. This is all sponsored by the Madoc-Tweed Junior hockey club. So come and bring the kids on Friday night to the Tweed arena. Game time is 9:00 p.m.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ELECTS OFFICERS

At the regular December meeting of the Madoc and District Chamber of Commerce, held in the Town Hall on Wednesday, December 14th, the results of the election of 1967 officers were as follows:

President: Larry Stickwood
Secretary: Thos. Ross
Treasurer: Jack Stewart
Directors: Clarence Farrow, Clayton Smith, Gordon Pigden, Kel Kincaid, Wilf Monnell, Pres Nickle, Robt. O'Riordan, Grant Ketcheson.

One of the directors will be appointed Vice-President after the new officers have been installed.

It was felt that with 1967 being Centennial Year, the Chamber of Commerce should have a very important part to play in all projects during the year.

THIEVES FORCE THEIR WAY INTO GEORGE WEST'S STORE

Thieves forced their way into Geo. West's Men's Wear Store last week but escaped without taking anything with them. Mr. West was working in his office about 8:30 on Monday night of last week when he heard someone walking in the rear of the store. He thought it was his son, Ken, and paid little attention.

Later Ken came into the store and discovered about 40 pair of large size men's pants missing. On investigating, it was found that someone had gained entrance to the building by forcing their way into a rear door and the bundle of pants were found lying just inside the partly opened door.

It is believed the would-be thieves were frightened away and dropped the pants as they made their escape.

HONOR COUPLE ON 25th ANNIVERSARY

STIRLING — Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm McMullen of Stirling, R.R. 3, were tendered a party by their family at their home on December 11th on the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary. A large number of relatives and friends were in attendance. The two daughters, Mrs. Gerald Morgan (Muriel) of Port Hope, and (Shirley) Mrs. Ralph Carlisle of Stirling and their son, Jim received the guests as they arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. McMullen welcomed the guests in the living room. Also present were the attendants, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McMullen of Batawa and the bride's mother, Mrs. Percy Brownson of Marmora.

The rooms were decorated with an array of silver decorations, bells and white poinsettias. The dining table was covered with a white damask cloth and centered with a three-tier anniversary cake in white and silver decor. Floral china tea services with cups and saucers were used for the occasion and pouring tea were the bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. Percy McMullen; also Mrs. Earl Wallace, Mrs. George Carlisle and Mrs. Sid Morgan. A number of others assisted the daughters with serving. The Misses Patay and Susan McMullen of Belleville were in charge of the guest book when recorded guests in attendance from Deloro, Madoc, Marmora, Foxboro, Belleville, Batawa and the surrounding area.

The honoured couple received a large array of greeting cards which included a message from Rod Webb, M. P. They were also the recipients of numerous gifts which included a silver tea set service from the immediate family; a recliner chair from brothers and sisters and a special gift of linen from the neighbours.

Mrs. McMullen is the former Kathleen Brownson, daughter of Mrs. Percy Brownson, Marmora, and the late Mr. Brownson, while Malcolm Alexander McMullen is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McMullen. They were married Friday, December 13th, 1941 in Trinity United Church parsonage by Rev. Alfred Poulter.

They resided near Springbrook for several years and later moved to the old homestead, formerly the Sharp farm near Stirling. Both are members of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling and Mrs. McMullen is an officer of the Laurel Rebekah Lodge.

On the night previous the daughters entertained several members of the immediate family at a turkey dinner at the McMullen home.

STUDDERED TIRES ALLOWED ON ALL CANADIAN ROADS

Studded tires are permitted or tolerated on the highways of every province in Canada, according to the Canadian Highway Safety Council.

The Council, in a survey, found that legislation enacted by provincial governments during the past year has made it possible to drive a motor vehicle equipped with studded tires without fear of breaking the law. In four provinces, the time for using studded tires legally is limited to the winter months. In most instances, a driver may be charged if his studded tires damage the road.

The Council advocates the use of studded tires in winter as a safety measure but adds that tire chains provide much greater stopping control.

The Council quotes Professor A. H. Easton, Director of the Motor Vehicle Research Laboratory of the University of Wisconsin: "1966 findings show that the use of new studded tires on the rear wheels of a vehicle will, on the average, reduce braking distance from a speed of 20 mph on glare ice by 21 per cent as compared with new highway tires. Under similar conditions, reinforced tire chains on the rear wheels will reduce braking distance by approximately 47%."

The Council adds that snow tires provide seven per cent improvement in braking distance over conventional highway tires.

British Columbia, the Council reported, permits the use of studded tires between Oct. 1 and March 31 unless there is evidence of road damage. In Alberta and Saskatchewan, studded tires are permitted unless road damage occurs. New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island allow their use.

Manitoba permits their use between November 1 and April 30. In Ontario and Quebec they are tolerated unless the road is damaged. Nova Scotia limits them to between Oct. 15 and April 15. In Newfoundland the limit is from Nov. 30 to April 16.

With the use of studded tires increasing, the Council warns all motorists to take the shorter stopping distances into account in leaving space between their vehicles and the vehicles ahead. "Tail-gating is always a perilous procedure," said CHSC, "but with stopping distances shortened considerably with studded tires, rear-end crashes will increase unless every motorist drives to avoid them."

A major attraction of the Canadian pavilion at Expo 67 will be "Uki," a two-headed monster, about 30 feet long, which will emerge from the water, breathing fire and smoke every hour. It's the work of Sculptor Gerald Gladstone of Toronto.

SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

Christmas is real

Christmas comes but once a year.

In fact, it's just ahead. But have you heard the bad news?

Santa Claus is dead.

He didn't have a stroke. In fact it's difficult to say what made old Santa croak.

Some say it was exhaustion. Some say it was a clot.

But others seem to think he conked

From smoking too much pot.

Chimney-pot, that is, of course. He wouldn't touch the other.

But what an anti-climax. For Santa just to smother.

At least he could have fallen

From his sleigh and made a splash.

Or run into a satellite

With one almighty crash.

I know it's going to be hard to explain that to your kids, but that's your problem.

The revelation contained in the above doggerel is my personal campaign against the assortment of creeps going around smelling up the atmosphere with their God-is-Dead garbage.

There's just as much truth, and just as much common sense, in my report about S. Claus as there is in theirs about God.

I don't care whether they are eminent clerics or half-baked beatniks, the God-is-Dead crowd is dead wrong. He may be out to lunch occasionally, but He is not dead. He is very much alive. And you can go tell that to the mountain, my folksing friends.

Sorry if I sound a bit heated at this time of peace and goodwill and four-color ads for whisky and perfume. But I've had enough of the complete current scene for a bit. Quite enough of psychedelic sensations, and clever little clergymen saying glib things, and young people with open mouths who swallow anything that flies into them, and simple-minded, earnest "liberals" who bore the hell out of me trying to explain things far beyond them.

There, it's out. I'm just a ruddy old reactionary, after all. And I don't give a fiddle. Never in my life have I had a desire to be one of the "in" crowd, and I have no intention of starting now.

First of all, what is Christmas all about? Is it not a celebration, in the Christian world, of the basic tenet of faith: that God gave man the greatest gift in his power, a son, a living, breathing manifestation of His concern for the muddled, wrong-headed, two-legged creatures who make such a muck of things on their own?

He gave man this gift only once. But every year for 20 centuries, its celebration has renewed peace and joy and love in the world, even if only for a short time. That's quite a gift.

Now, Santa Claus is a little different. He's been in business only for about a century. He brings something different every year, and all his gifts can be broken, lost or worn out.

Already, a lot of people are getting a bit sick of Santa. They see him everywhere: on the radio, in department stores, at Christmas concerts, in beer advertisements. He looks a little different each time. And he spends two months of the year leering at us from all directions and ho-ho-ing like the village idiot.

He's like everybody's jolly old grampa. But after two months of white whiskers, belly laughs and urgings to buy, buy, buy, even jolly old grampa should be sent off to the funny farm.

How would you like to have God around for two months a year, every day and night, right where you could see him? And what's worse, where He could see you.

What we've got to do is stop treating God like Santa Claus. A visiting clergyman told us on Sunday the story of a family that wanted something very, very much. They prayed for it. And prayed and prayed, the whole family, as hard as they could, for a week. Nothing happened.

In despair, the father said, "Well, I guess God didn't answer our prayers."

His little daughter piped, "Sure He did, Dad. He said no."

That's faith. God is alive. Christmas is real. And if you have enough faith, maybe you'll find that the rumor about Santa's untimely demise is false, and that he's alive, too.

and former member of the House of Commons for Hastings South, may be the next leader of the Ontario Liberal Party.

Recently an organizational meeting of the Quinte Liberal Association heard Temple grouped with Robert Nixon, MPP for Brant, and Lloyd Francis, former MP for Carleton, as the top three men currently being mentioned as possible successors to Andrew Thompson, who recently retired as leader because of illness.

Authority for this statement was Dan Casey, executive-director of the Ontario Liberal Association, who addressed a gathering of over 50 at the Kiwanis Centre in Belleville.

He said of the three, only Mr. Nixon has officially announced he will stand.

Mr. Temple, Hastings South MP in the last Parliament, said he hadn't decided yet.

"I'm giving it some very serious thought," he said.

Mr. Casey said: "The name of Bob Temple has been ringing from Parliament Hill to Queen's Park as the next leader."

"The leadership, as you know, is open and we need a leader now."

Mr. Casey said there is a great desire within the Liberal Party of this province for unity, "a desire to get someone as leader who enjoys full party backing."

A WEEKLY LOOK AT EXPO '67

By TRACY S. LUDINGTON

The single word 'rendezvous' may be your answer, for you, and your well have myriad meanings to Canadians from coast to coast — but at EXPO in Montreal it means a wide-awake, furiously-functioning organization within an organization that has as its aim the task of making as certain as humanly possible that groups visiting the greatest show on earth will leave the exhibition satisfied with their jaunt.

If you have a group of 50 persons or more planning to visit EXPO any time between April 28 and October 27 during 1967, then EXPO-rendezvous is for you — make no mistake about it.

Drop a line to Denise Beaudry at EXPO-Rendezvous, and the wheels begin to whirl. You will receive a form to fill out, and on it are just the right questions so that Denise will be able to fit you into the right niche. Answer the questions fully, and EXPO will know what you want, when you want it, and will be able to size up your group so as to make last minute suggestions that may well afford extra pleasure for you.

If you are part of a group with special performing skills, for example, you may be doubly or triply welcome and find yourself in one of the amateur presentation spots; it may be that EXPO publicity department people will see in group's visit something well-worth publicizing; and it is not beyond the realm of possibility at all that you may find yourself on stage in EXPO's Bandshell Festival.

If it's passports, or guided tours, or daily programs, or the thousand and one other things that are bound to pop up in the guise of unanswered questions — then EXPO-Rendezvous is your answer, for you, and your whole group, if your group numbers 50 persons or more.

How is EXPO-Rendezvous doing to date? Very nicely thank you. More than 200,000 have signified their intention of visiting Expo some time during the six months of '67 that it is open, through the various groups now listed with 'Rendezvous', and with more than five months to go, Denise Beaudry feels that she has only scratched the surface.

The queries are pouring in from all parts of Canada, some parts of U.S. and even from Europe.

Majority of these queries from Europe, she says, have been from France and most of the tours from everywhere are planned by students, teachers and even school boards.

Then, of course, as if this wasn't quite enough, EXPO-Rendezvous deals with conventions that are being planned for Montreal during Expo time, and so far this little item numbers some 235 conventions — and Rendezvous is getting ready to take care of these people whether they are visiting EXPO for part of a day, a day or for two or three days.

query to Denise Beaudry at Expo Rendezvous? Of course it is. And when you get your questionnaire, be sure and fill it in as well as you can and ask all the extra questions you like — make it a real 20-question deal, then you'll be sure to have the right answers.

EXPO Rendezvous will send along all the information you require.

PROVINCIAL POLICE WEEKLY REPORT

The long Christmas and New Year's Holiday is upon us and in the newspapers, on the television, and on the radio, pleas will be made for an end to the annual slaughter on our highways. Statements will be made from every police department reporting a crackdown on offending motorists. The Nat. Safety Council will predict that "X" number of people will meet violent deaths over the holidays. And still this senseless carnage will continue.

There is a certain percentage of the population that will never be convinced that they are a menace to society on equal par with a person serving a life sentence in Kingston Penitentiary for non-capital murder.

To these people, an accident is only a word - something that happens to someone else and never concerns them. Thus they go careening along the highway, aiming their car from one city to another, down a narrow strip of pavement at eighty miles per hour regardless of weather or traffic conditions.

It's often been said that if this type of individual would fly off the road, hit a tree and kill himself instead of some innocent person, it wouldn't be so bad, but it's a rare case when a person loses his life that he doesn't leave a hole in someone else's life.

If and when one of these individuals is involved in a traffic accident, it is amazing the variety of excuses that they can produce to prove the other driver is at fault, even going so far as to indicate that if the other driver hadn't been on that stretch of road at that time, there wouldn't have been an accident.

For this one person in a thousand, the other nine hundred and ninety-nine must drive in fear. But from a little fear can come a good lesson. It can teach you to become a better driver - a driver who is always looking out for the other driver and not just taking care of himself. In short, a defensive driver. If that driver speeding up the sidewalk towards the intersection fails to stop, are you leaving yourself enough time to avoid collision - are you going to hope that he will somehow stop in time? Is that driver passing another car and coming toward you going to have enough time to pull back in line? Are you going to slow down to make certain or are you going to maintain constant speed toward certain destruction?

Remember it is always better to give up your right-of-way than it is to give up a life. The next time you are inclined to take chances to save a few precious minutes, take a look at your wife sitting beside you on the passenger's seat - the "suicide seat" as it is sometimes called. How could you get along without her? Think of your children fighting in the back seat and getting on your nerves. Consider their lives if you or your wife or possibly both, are snuffed out for a moment's inconsideration.

This Christmas have your friends come to visit you in your home, not in a funeral home.

A light week of activity was reported by the Madoc Detachment, Ontario Provincial Police.

Five traffic accidents were investigated during the week, none involving injury. Forty-one vehicles were checked, 22 warnings issued and five charges laid.

A total of seventeen criminal occurrences were investigated, three thefts, three breaking and entering, three disturbances, and eight miscellaneous.

Officers spent 10 3/4 man hours in court in which eleven convictions were registered, seven for traffic and four for liquor. Five thousand, one hundred and eleven miles of area roads were patrolled during 512 man hours worked.

SALES TAX UP ONE PER CENT

More than 2,000,000 Canadians in the higher income brackets will each pay up to $120 more in Old Age Security Tax next year and the federal sales tax will rise 1 percentage point to 12 per cent effective January 1st.

Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp announced the tax increases, totalling $290-million next year, when he presented his long-awaited minibudget in the Commons last night.

The revenue is needed, Mr. Sharp said, to cover the cost of the new guaranteed income program for needy old age pensioners.

The rise in the Old Age Security Tax, which is collected with income tax, will bring in $135-million.

Mr. Sharp did his best to sound like Santa Claus handing out presents to pensioners.

"It is fitting in this Christmas season that we should be engaged in making a major contribution to the comfort and dignity of our senior citizens," he told the Commons. And he posed for a publicity picture that showed him in his office unpacking a Christmas parcel of pensions for the old folk.

Mr. Sharp is bound to look more like Scrooge to housewives who will find the sales tax pushing prices higher next year and to the 2,300,000 Canadians whose direct taxes will rise by up to $120 in 1967.

Old age pensions at present are financed in part by 4 per cent of taxable income up to a maximum of $120 a year. Mr. Sharp plans to leave the rate the same but to double the maximum to $240.

This means that an average Canadian, married with two children, will pay no extra tax unless his income exceeds $5,700.

At $6,000 he will pay $12 more; at $7,000, $52 more. Those earning $10,000 or more will pay the full $120 increase.

Mr. Sharp estimates that about 6,500,000 Canadians pay income and old age security taxes. But only the top earning third—about 2,300,000—will be hit by the higher tax.

All Canadians, however, will share the burden of the higher sales tax, which is hidden at the retail level, but will show in rising prices.

Mr. Sharp said it was impossible to estimate just what the effect would be, but commented: "Certainly it should increase the cost of living by much less than 1 per cent."

He emphasized that food, fuel and services do not carry the tax and said the increase will not apply to production machinery and equipment or to building materials.

Mr. Sharp said he had decided not to raise the revenue by increasing personal income tax because of fiscal arrangements with the provinces and said it would be unwise to raise the corporation tax beyond levels comparable with those in the United States.

TWEED DISTRICT IN THE EYES OF A NORTHERNER

To a Northerner, and I use the term loosely, Tweed District lies partially in the rolling farmlands of the Ottawa Valley; anyone who has travelled Highway 17 to Ottawa can confirm this. As one leaves the long rolling wooded hills of Pembroke district which remind you of Algonquin Park with endless lakes and rivers teeming with fish and miles of undisturbed forests, we enter the farmlands which parallel the Ottawa River from near the city of Pembroke to Ottawa. This is prime agriculture land with postage stamp size woodlots and plantations, paved roads cross the highway at regular intervals, and the highway is dotted with innumerable hamlets, villages and towns. If time permitted, and you were fortunate enough to have travelled beyond Ottawa to the St. Lawrence River and along scenic Highway 2, or speedway 401, toward Kingston, Belleville, etcetra, the trip does little to change your mistaken impression of what really lies a few miles inland along your route.

Little do you suspect as you pass through Renfrew at an elevation of 375' above sea level that within a few minutes drive to the west, lies Mount St. Patrick at an elevation of 1375', a steep rise of 1000' in 15 miles nor does it prepare you for the desolate sight of abandoned farms with what were at one time stout buildings, now in various stages of collapse, long since abandoned by the ancestors of the early settlers in search of a more lucrative income than could be made from these marginal farmlands. The paved roads crossing Highway 17 have now disappeared into narrow winding gravel roads, and forest access roads, with scattered farms in the more fertile valleys and wooded hills on all sides.

The district fire control plan accessibility map shows over half the district lies within the one hour up to two hours access range and about one third of this is in the two to three hour and three to six hour travel time range.

Travelling south on Highway 41 or going north on 62, one's vision of the lush farmland of the Ottawa Valley soon disappears in the unexpected miles of almost mountainous hills covered with white and red pine or mixed strands of hardwood and conifers, and more often than not, capped by barren rock outcroppings not unlike the famed tourist regions of Timagami and Algoma. From these woods came nearly 5,000,000 cu. feet of timber in 1965, a far cry from Geraldton's 56,000,000 we admit, and the district ranked second in the province in the production of Christmas trees. This sustained yield is slowly being increased with the accelerated crown land planting program, county forest program, and the private woodland improvement program.

Hunting and Fishing: Yes - Tweed district has that too. Statistics show almost 1,101,440 acres of water in the district, and not the muddy silt filled creeks northerners associate with Southern Ontario - crystal clear, unpolluted lakes alive with all types of game fish - speckles, rainbow, pickerel, pike, fighting muskies, etcetra even the barbut, if your tastes so desire.

While speaking of water, let us not forget the mighty Madawaska water shed, and last undeveloped water source for Hydro power in Southern Ontario, currently under development at a cost of roughly $55,000,000 by Ontario Hydro.

Last year, deer hunting statistics showed a district success rate of 29.0% at check stations, and hunt camp success of 47.9%.

It is also worthy of note that some 20,000 hunters participate in the annual big game hunt in the district each year, especially for deer - a record hard to match in any other part of the province.

TWEED DISTRICT STAFF HOLDS CHILDREN'S CHRISTMAS PARTY

The annual Lands and Forests Tweed District office and Tweed Chief Ranger Division Children's Christmas Party, organized by the District Office Stenographic Staff, was held on Sunday afternoon, December 11th.

After movies and a sing song, Santa Claus arrived with gifts for 52 boys and girls ten years of age and under.

That Santa Claus is profoundly interested in Tweed area children was obvious in that Santa asked that his "treat" by those present be given in support of the Tweed and District Figure Skating Club.

COINS

A most interesting and easy collection to obtain is one of Canadian five cent nickels from 1922 to the present. This collection has only three coins which are fairly difficult to obtain. All the dates from the 1937 dot to the present can be found in circulation with the exception of the two tombac nickels of 1942 and 1943 and these can be purchased from any dealer at a very low price.

The George V nickels from 1922 to 1936 are also still to be found in circulation except for the 1925 and 1926 which are not cheap but still are within the pocket book of most collectors. The average price of a 1925 is $18, 1926 is $3 and 1916 far six (which is a variety and not necessary in order to have a good collection) $40.

To say that the rare nickels 1925 and 1926 are not to be found in circulation is incorrect. The statement means that they are very difficult to find, however, four of the 25 and two of the far six have been taken from change in this area in the last two years.

Now, perhaps, is a good time to warn all collectors not to clean coins, this will either lower the value of the coin or completely ruin them.

An interesting and enjoyable Christmas gift is to give a child twenty or thirty dollars in rolls of pennies from the bank and let them sort through the coins for one of each date. Have them keep one coin of each date, return the balance to the bank and you have an interesting, unusual and unusual gift and they also have a good start on a collection of coins.

The trend of today's Canadian coins is very interesting when you look at auction sales of coins in 1956 and 1966. In 1956 a set of large uncirculated Canadian cents sold for $155, and today they would cost over $1400; a 1925 brilliant uncirculated small cent was $18 and now is $225; a 1921 Canadian 50c piece in very good condition sold for $260 and now it catalogues for $3300.

Anyone having old or unusual bank notes (paper money) are requested to write in describing these bills so a display for the Centennial year can be assembled. We would like to have these bills on either a loan basis or we will purchase them. If they are put in the Centennial display, a suitable card will be placed on any bills that are on loan with acknowledgment to the person loaning the bills.

BANCROFT HOME FOR AGED TO BE BUILT NEXT YEAR

Tenders for the construction of the new county home for the aged at Bancroft will be called this week with completion of construction expected some time early next fall.

The building will also accommodate an office for the county Children's Aid Society.

Dungannon Reeve, Calvin White, presenting the Hastings Manor report to county council, said the committee had decided to install electric heating at the new home in North Hastings. The installation cost will compare favorably with that of alternative fuel, while maintenance and operational costs should prove to be less.

One saving will be that it will be unnecessary to hire a man to look after a heating boiler.

Reeve White said that despite the wet weather, construction of the addition at Hastings Manor outside Belleville was ahead of schedule.

Walls and brickwork are well advanced, the rafters are going up this week and the roofing should be in place before Christmas. Completion of the 50-bed wing is expected in April.

Construction cost of the wing is expected to be reduced by about $30,000 through assistance from the winter works program.

Three Hastings Manor residents this year entered handicrafts at the CNE. Robert Odendahl received a second prize, Mrs. Fred Dwyer, a third prize and Miss Edith Latham, received honorable mention.

COOPER U.C.W.

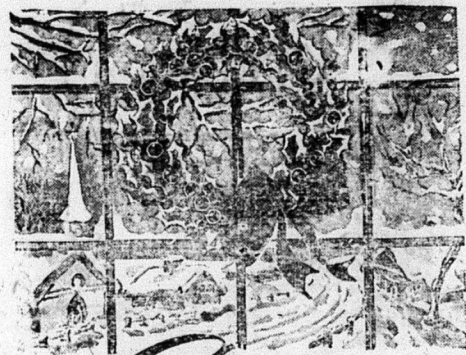

The annual meeting of Cooper U.C.W. was held on December 7th at the home of Mrs. Fred Moorcroft in Madoc with an attendance of nineteen. The roll call was answered by each member showing a favourite Christmas card she had received in the past. The business period followed in which the conveners gave their reports for the year. The nominating committee report was given by Mrs. Carl Fitzgerald and the slate of officers for 1967 is as follows:

President, Mrs. Fred Bailey; Vice-President, Mrs. Dennis Chapman; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Maurice Reynolds; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Claude Keene; Treasurer, Mrs.

Wm. Matthews; Community Friendship and Visiting, Mrs. Herb Brady; Mrs. Carl Fitzgerald; Co-operation in Christian and Missionary Education, Mrs. Gordon Holmes; Stewardship and Recruiting, Miss Mary Taylor; Literature and Communications, Mrs. Herb Brady; Citizenship and Social Action, Mrs. Rex Rollins; Supply and Welfare, Mrs. Frank Reynolds; Leadership Development, Mrs. Frank Parks; Programme, Mrs. Allan McCoy; Finance Committee, Mrs. Leonard Graham, Mrs. Gordon Holmes; Official Board Representative, Mrs. Fred Bailey; Board of Stewards Representative, Mrs. Rex Rollins; Manse Convener, Mrs. Wm. Matthews; Social Functions, Mrs. Gordon Holmes; Nominating Committee, Mrs. George, Graham, Mrs. Christie Bailey, Mrs. William Rollins; Pianist, Mrs. W. Matthews; Assistant Pianist, Mrs. W. Rollins; Auditors, Mrs. Stanley Rollins, Miss Bertha Moorcroft.

The installation of officers was conducted by Mrs. George Harris.

A Christmas service followed with Mrs. Allan McCoy acting as leader and the members giving responses. Several Christmas hymns were included in the service as well as Scriptural passages on the Christmas story read by Mrs. Leonard Parks, Mrs. Carl Fitzgerald and Mrs. Dennis Chapman. An appropriate reading was given by Mrs. Fred Bailey. At the close of the program, lunch was served by Mrs. Moorcroft and her assistants.

HASTINGS APPROVES JOINT HEALTH UNIT

Hastings County Council has approved the amalgamation of the Hastings County Health Unit with that of Prince Edward county.

County board chairman reeve Wm. Shannon said that it was felt the larger unit with a greater population could operate more efficiently and at a lower cost and could provide expanded services.

The only disadvantage that could be seen was that Hastings might lose some of its autonomy.

Prince Edward county council also this week approved amalgamation leaving only Belleville city council to give its assent.

The suggested name for the combined health unit is The Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit. The unit would serve a combined population of approximately 92,000 people — 40,000 in Hastings, 32,000 in Belleville and close to 20,000 in Prince Edward County.

Warden Clayton Hall said the idea of a combined health unit had started with the Quinte district executive committee which meets monthly to discuss regional problems.

One of the main reasons for the proposed amalgamation had been the small size of the Prince Edward county unit which could not be operated economically.

An over-all annual saving of about $24,000 is estimated for the combined unit, resulting in a saving of $6,000 to Hastings county.

Headquarters for the combined health unit would be in Belleville with a sub-office in Picton.

One medical officer of health would be eliminated, while there would also be a saving on office rental and clerical staff.

The combined health unit board would have nine members instead of the present seven. Hastings would have three appointees, Prince Edward two and Belleville two. Two of the appointees would be by the province, one from Prince Edward and the other from Hastings or Belleville.

The way would be left open for Trenton to join the unit at some future date.

COUNTY WELFARE SYSTEM CONSIDERED

Hastings county council will consider the advisability of adopting the county welfare system as an alternative to welfare being a municipal responsibility as at present.

On Monday members listened to what the province will do to assist in setting up such a system and at the same time were told of the experience in neighboring Prince Edward where county welfare has been in effect for the past two years.

Arne Neilson, supervisor for the Ontario department of welfare, said the province would pay 50 per cent of the salaries for the county welfare personnel and at the same time would contribute toward travelling costs.

He said the nine counties in Ontario now had the county welfare system. By April of 1967 another four counties will have adopted the central system.

The extended north and south distance peculiar to Hastings was not thought to be a disadvantage for a successful county welfare unit, although a sub-office might be necessary in the north.

Grant Harvey, welfare administrator for Prince Edward, told of experience in that county and answered questions relating to welfare operation.

He said that for the month of November welfare assistance had averaged about $95 per family. Always, he said, his department endeavored to treat welfare applicants with respect and human dignity.

Warden Clayton Hall said that councillors would further discuss the matter and decide whether the county welfare system should be adopted in Hastings.

ARDA COMMITTEE SET UP BY HASTINGS

Hastings County next year will set up a committee to deal with special development projects in the area which might be carried out with government financial assistance.

The recommendation for setting up the committee was made at Monday's meeting of county council by a special committee headed by Marmora township reeve John Wilkes.

A standing committee to be known as the county Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act committee will be composed of four county council members of the 1967 council.

Also a twenty-member advisory committee composed of representatives from various county organizations, will be named, the duty of the committee being to suggest and correlate development programs for the county.

Projects coming under an ARDA program could be agricultural redevelopment, including alternative land use, industrial development, soil and water conservation, wild life development, educational development or any other project which might help to increase income opportunities.

The advisory committee would explore all details of a development project before it is presented to the county council ARDA committee but no recommendation would be binding on county council or its representatives.

Councillors were told that already farmers in North Hastings had received ARDA assistance through a maple syrup co-operative, initiated in Renfrew County. Financial assistance for the Eldorado Cheese factory addition had been secured while farmers were seeking ARDA grants for fence removal and drainage projects.

Last year ARDA assistance had been secured for strengthening a bridge on the boundary of Hungerford and Elzevir township to allow development of a marble quarry.

The roads and bridges report submitted by Elzevir Reeve Clayton McMurray showed that as of November 30, $604,352 had been spent on the county roads system. The total roads and bridges bylaw for this year was $743,475 of which $80,000 was allotted to the suburban roads commission.

In addition there had been $280,262 spent on development roads.

Construction projects completed during the year include a new bridge over Parks Creek, built at a cost of $55,000, and reconstruction of a portion of the Springbrook road (now nearly completed).

A contract for the supply and erection of pre-cast pre-stressed concrete girders for Fairfield's Bridge in Thurlow Twp. has been awarded to Wilson Concrete at a price of $92,717. The girders are now under production and are scheduled for erection in 1967.

A development road project completed during the year was the hot mix paving on the Glen Miller road south of Frankford. Total cost of the project, including engineering, construction and land purchases, was about $449,000.

Construction is underway on county road 12 north of Madoc and the general contractor, Moffat Construction of Ottawa will continue through the winter months with rock excavation.

"MAN THE PROVIDER"

"Man the Provider," the largest single exhibit at Expo 67, will tell the story of agricultural science. It will show human figures pouring down a ramp at a rate of two a second — representing new mouths to be fed each day in an expanding world population.

CANADIAN TIRE CENTENNIAL TOUR

Six weeks before entries close, more than 300 antique car enthusiasts are awaiting the final selection of cars for the Canadian Tire Centennial Tour.

On January 15, 100 of the finest classic and antique cars in Canada, as well as representatives from the United States and Europe will be chosen to participate in Canada's largest competition tour.

To date, officials of the Tour have travelled throughout Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes, visiting all the towns and cities affected by the Tour.

Preparations for parades, welcoming committees, civic receptions and many other festivities have been arranged with the local centennial committees, city officials, police, the Canadian Tire dealers, and various other organizations.

Not only will this Centennial Tour be a colourful, once-in-a-lifetime tour, but it will capture the interest and enthusiasm of everyone as these cars of yesteryear chug their way to Montreal and Expo '67.

The organizing committee, comprised of six Canadian antique car clubs will act as host clubs in their particular areas, provide Tour marshals, and also assist in the selection of the top one hundred cars to be chosen for the Canadian Tire Centennial Tour beginning July 24.

The clubs are:

- The Antique and Classic Car Club of Canada.
- The Vintage Automobile Club of Montreal.
- The Historic Vehicle Club of Ontario - Windsor.
- The Antique Automobile Club of Ottawa.
- The Roaring Twenties Antique Auto Club - Yarmouth, N.S.
- The Halifax Antique Auto Club.

JUSTICE COSTS UP SLIGHTLY

Hearing of committee reports took up much time during Monday's first day meeting of the December session of Hastings county council.

Among those heard were the finance and public property committee report and the administration of justice report.

The last named report showed administration of justice costs for the first nine months of the year at $104,323 were up slightly over the same period, although the cost to the county was down.

This was the result of a new administration of justice agreement having been signed with Belleville and Trenton. Because of increased population these two municipalities are paying a greater share of justice costs.

Belleville's share for the first nine months was $39,464 compared with $30,841 for the same period last year, and Trenton's share was $15,069, up from $13,712 from last year. The county share dropped from $47,728 to $39,172.

The Public Schools Consultative Committee report was given by Chairman Don Rogers of Stirling. Marjorie Reeve, William Shannon, reported for the Secondary Schools Consultative Committee.

Clarke T. Rollins, MPP for Hastings East, told council that the Ontario Municipal board had given advanced approval for the construction of the new central school in Tyendinaga.

Total cost of the nine-room school is about $260,000, including site, building and furnishings.

CONSERVATION AREA BUDGET SET AT $69,200 FOR 1967

A 1967 budget of $69,200 has been proposed for the Moira River Conservation Authority and a recommendation for this amount will go forward to the incoming authority members.

Of this amount, $18,000 would be raised by local levy, and an estimated $48,050 would be received from federal and provincial grants.

The over-all total would include an expenditure of $46,400 for capital works including $8,000 for forestry, $6,400 for conservation areas, and $32,000 for water control.

Ordinary expenditures would call for $20,150 and maintenance of schemes $2,650.

The main item of interest to Belleville will be the construction of a seasonal dam in the Moira River just above the old Lazier's dam. Cost of the dam is estimated at $14,000.

Of the $18,000 to be raised for authority purposes through local levy, the city of Belleville would pay 60 per cent or $10,800, the same as for the last three years.

OUR HIGH SCHOOL

What a lovely, busy, exciting season this is! You just know it is Christmas time by the very feel of the air around us. May this access of good-will spread beyond our neighbourhood, gathering momentum as it spreads, until it reaches the far corners of the globe!

Here at school we know it is Christmas time. The beautiful tree inside the main entrance tells us so; the beautiful decorations in some of the class rooms tell us so; the echoes of carols being practiced in French, Latin and English, all tell us. And should we also mention the Christmas reports, marking the end of the first term at school—almost half of the first term, really.

We are glad to welcome to our staff Dr. Stanley Beatty, who succeeds Mr. Juneja, and is teaching Grades XII and XIII Chemistry and part of Grade XI Physics. Dr. Beatty, who has his degree in Bio-Chemistry, worked in Halifax from the time of his graduation until 1955. He then worked with the United Nations in Brazil and in India. Following that he was with the Canadian External Aid in Uganda. For the past three years, he and Mrs. Beatty have been living in retirement at Melra Lake. Dr. Beatty is a man of broad interests and wide experience; CHSS is very fortunate in having him for the remainder of the school year.

"The Christmas Dance last Friday night was as nice as we've ever had" was the comment we have heard several times. Michael Paul and his Endees provided excellent music, and the new gym decked out in the Christmas motif was very attractive, thanks and T. C. Barton.

Great commendation to the clean-up committee on Saturday morning who did a fine job. They were Jan Kinach, Carol Ash and Alan Danford.

The cadets who went to Toronto last Saturday enjoyed the day immensely. After a visit to the Royal Ontario Museum, they toured the new city hall. They were especially impressed with the wonderful view from the observation area on the 27th floor both by day and by night with the myriads of dancing lights all over the city. Some visited the new Moss Park Armouries, home of the Queen's Own Rifles. They even found time during their busy day to go shopping and to ride on the subway.

Mrs. Downey and her Home Ec. classes and Mrs. Fleming and her Occupations Girls have each been entertaining many of the staff members and many different classes to delightful little coffee parties. Lucky, lucky are those who have been able to enjoy their hospitality and their tasty cakes.

School closes this Thursday for the Christmas recess with a special Assembly, in which several different classes, groups, individuals and the staff are taking part. Following that, Miss West is entertaining her staff to luncheon in the staff room.

We have heard of only a few holiday plans - Miss West, as past president District 23, will be attending the annual 4-day Federation Assembly in Toronto, the Kinachs are going to the Niagara Peninsula; Mr. Graves is flying home to Saskatchewan; the Weavers are off to Bracebridge, then to attend numismatic clubs in the States; Lorraine Holland and her family have gone to Florida.

A little reminder - classes re-open on Tuesday, January 3rd, and now in the words of Tiny Tim: "God Bless us Everyone."

UNIVERSITY WOMEN HOLD ANNUAL YULE PARTY

On Wednesday, December 7, at the Shrine Club, the Women's University Club of Belleville and District enjoyed their annual dinner party. Christmas decorations and place cards contributed to the festive atmosphere. Grace was said by Mrs. R. K. Jeffrey, and the toast to the Queen was proposed by Mrs. P. T. Seibert.

After the delicious dinner of traditional ham and turkey, Mrs. R. G. Walsh, the president wittily announced awards for recent personal or peculiar contributions to our national development. The recipients were Mrs. R. S. Burt, Mrs. P. R. DeTracy, Mrs. E. A. Manderville, Mrs. D. T. Thompson, Mrs. W. S. Babbitt, Mrs. R. L. Graham, Mrs. F. H. Bellstedt, and Mrs. R. W. Camm.

As at all Christmas dinners, a warm welcome was extended to former members and new members. Mrs. F. Dewey, Mrs. O. J. Jones, and Mrs. R. H. Cunningham have returned after being away from the community for some years. Very capably introduced were these new members: Mrs. E. Cameron, Miss M. Fisher, Mrs. P. M. Howe, Mrs. R. F. W. Icely, Mrs. F. W. Killam, Mrs. E. D. Lane, Mrs. W. G. G. Lindley, Mrs. D. A. MacIntosh, Miss Lynda Overy, Mrs. C. H. Patrick, Mrs. O. S. Swaren, Miss Jean Williams, and Mrs. C. Savage. The program consisted of an original play, "The Voices of Christmas", written and directed by Mrs. R. K. Patterson. Thoughtful and satirical, it was forcefully presented by Mrs. R. K. Jeffrey, the Image Maker and Advertising Executive; Mrs. R. H. G. Cunningham, the clergyman; Mrs. F. H. Bellstedt, the poet; Mrs. R. K. Patterson, the Woman; and Mrs. R. M. McNicol, the Child.

The club is grateful to Mrs. J. E. Nelles, and Mrs. E. A. Manderville for arranging this successful party, to Mrs. R. S. Burt for help with the table decorations, to Mrs. D. T. Thompson for telephoning, and to Mrs. E. A. Manderville for the favors. According to custom, unwrapped gifts were brought for the mentally ill. Mrs. W. N. Hurst has announced that this year they will be sent to the hospital at Cobourg.

Our excellent telephone directory was made by Mrs. J. L. Acton and Mrs. E. A. Wiens.

NDP HELD MEETING IN MARMORA

New Democratic Party members from as far north as Bancroft and as far south as Deseronto gathered in Marmora on Saturday afternoon, December 17, 1966 to organize under the new Provincial Banner of Hastings Riding.

Chairman of the meeting, which was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Frost, was Ian E. Reilly, President of Quinte Riding New Democratic Party, and Past President of Hastings South NDP.

Mr. Bill Cumptsy, Provincial NDP organizer, addressed the meeting and expressed the best wishes of party leader Donald C. MacDonald who had originally been scheduled to address the meeting until he was involved in a car accident recently. Mr. Cumptsy said that "it was very important to launch project '67 in this area, and that it was necessary that the new riding prepare for the coming election as quickly as possible". Mr. Cumptsy went on to point out that the liberal party was all but dead in this province and especially in Hastings, and that with hard work the NDP would give the Tories a run for their money in the riding.

Tom James, a Bancroft Sales Representative, upon being elected President of Hastings New Democratic Party, said "After 100 years of stagnation in Hastings, the New Democratic Party are going to give the people of the riding a Centennial present that will lead the way to progress and economic expansion in the future." Mr. James pointed out that, "with the election of membership Chairman and party Directors for almost every town and township in the county the party is well on the way to victory."

Elected Vice-President of the riding was Charlie Clemens of Marmora. The position of Sec-Treas. was filled by Mrs. K. G. Loucks of Thurlow Township.

Elected to co-ordinate the activities of the local membership chairmen in each area was Mrs. Wm. Kells of Deseronto.

Ian E. Reilly adjourned the meeting by pointing out that with two NDP members elected from Hastings County Ridings (one from Hastings and one from Quinte), the County would be giving leadership to all of Eastern Ontario.

The United Church Women Bethesda held their December 7th meeting in the afternoon in the basement of the Church. The president, Mrs. Alice Wood, opened the meeting with a poem, "The home at Christmas". Theme song and prayer was said.

Roll Call was answered by seventeen members and one child. Exchange of Christmas gifts was Roll Call for December.

November was a busy month for sick calls as a number from the community were in the hospital.

Mrs. Illa Mullett had the worship and hymn 57, "Gentle Mary Laid Her Child" was sung. Mrs. Marjorie Holland provided the music.

The scripture lesson was taken from Psalm 139 and read by Mrs. Marjorie Holland.

The themes of scripture and worship were on "The Ever Loving God". Hymn 59, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing" was sung.

Minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. Norma MacMillan.

The Treasurers report was given by Mrs. Marjorie Holland which was very satisfactory. The business period was very short.

There was an election of officers for the New Year. They remain the same as last year: Mrs. Allan Wood, President; Mrs. Isabelle Wickens 1st Vice Pres.; Mrs. Vera Francis, 2nd Vice Pres.; Mrs. Norma MacMillan, Secretary; Mrs. Ida Wickens, Assistant Sec.; Mrs. Marjorie Holland, Treasurer; Mrs. Aileen Holland, Assistant Treas. The sick committee: Mrs. Vera Francis, Miss Ruby Holland, Mrs. Mary Fleming, Mrs. Ethel Francis, Mrs. Isabelle Wickens, Mrs. Illa Mullett, Mrs. Norma MacMillan, and Mrs. Alice Wood.

Mrs. Marjorie Holland again is our organist. Mrs. Irene Ash is looking after quilts and Mrs. Jean Aylesworth is press secretary.

Mrs. Illa Mullett had the program and gave a reading on "Christmas Dinner on the Farm", and she also showed how to make a Christmas Centrepiece for the table and Mrs. Marjorie Holland was the winner.

The meeting closed with the Benediction. Lunch was served by Miss Ruby Holland, Mrs. Ruby Francis, Mrs. Mary Fleming and Mrs. Illa Mullett and a social half hour was spent by all.

A PATCH OF BLUE

On Monday, December 26th, the Plaza Theatre, Marmora, takes great pleasure in presenting one of the year's finest motion pictures, "A Patch of Blue".

Here is an exciting, dramatic and heart warming story of a blind girl, an unbearable home, and her being befriended by a negro boy. A story that will pull at your heart strings as it is portrayed by Elizabeth Hartman as the blind girl, Shelley Winters as her aunt, which performance won her the Academy Award as best supporting actress, and Sidney Portier as the negro boy is excellent. It will do your heart good to see "A Patch of Blue" showing Mon., Tues., Wed., Dec. 26, 27, 28. 8:15 each evening.

PLOWMEN'S ANNUAL MEETING

The Hastings County Plowmen's Association held its Annual Meeting on December 14th. The same executive was returned to office for the second year, with Harry Coulter, R.R. 2, Tweed, as President; Kenneth Mumby, R.R. 2, Harold, as 1st Vice-President; Wilfrid Forestell R.R. 3, Madoc, as 2nd Vice-President. Provincial Director will be Kenneth Mumby again. The successful plowing match of 1966 was reviewed. It was agreed that in 1967 the policy of keeping the match in a central area would be continued. As a result the site will be selected again in the West Huntingdon area.

The decision was also made to continue the discussions of the United Farm Service Organization. For the county, suggestions in this field would include such things as a joint annual meeting under the general chairman, perhaps a feature banquet and a general membership rather than one for each of the various groups. Within this framework, the Plowmen's Association, the Soil and Crop Improvement Association, The Safety Council and the Beef Improvement Association could easily operate and maintain their purpose and identity. Their programs would be co-ordinated to the advantage of all concerned. It will be discussed further as the season progresses.

The Swiss have been entrusted with the job of keeping time throughout Expo 67. The Time Centre at the Swiss pavilion will transmit "Expo Time" to a dozen watch towers and to 70 public clocks on the site.

BENEFITS PROCESSED BY 'PHONE

Commencing Monday unemployed persons making application for unemployment benefits, will no longer have to come to the local unemployment office.

In the future all applications for assistance will be made by mail or telephone, thus eliminating lineups which have occurred in the past.

Cecil Hiuier, manager of the local unemployment insurance office, made the announcement yesterday at Hastings county council, noting that applicants will now be asked to fill in forms and return them by mail.

The change follows the move made some months ago under which all claims are now paid by mail.

TWEED GARAGE GUTTED BY FLAMES

Battling in biting, below-zero weather, firemen from four district departments Tuesday night halted a stubborn fire threat to an entire business block on Tweed's Main Street.

Wednesday, as flames draped the scene of the blaze, officials estimated a loss at $109,000 after flames gutted the James Rivers garage and showroom on Victoria Street, destroying trucks, tractors, and other equipment.

Also lost in the fire was the Rivers' home — a second-floor apartment above the garage.

However, firemen successfully carried off a concentrated effort to contain the blaze from spreading to a next-door wood-and-insul-brick garage.

"We poured over 200,000 gallons on it," said village reeve Guy Hughes. "It was the most stubborn fire you ever saw."

Local volunteers, under Chief Ross McNaught, were reinforced by units from Belleville, Madoc and Frankford under the Quinte district mutual aid scheme.

The fight was staged in bitterly cold weather. Tuesday afternoon temperatures began sliding and between 4 p.m. and 8 a.m. Wednesday dipped to five below zero.

Lost in the blaze were three trucks and a new car owned by Mr. Rivers, a truck owned by Ray Courneyea, a township truck and two farm tractors.

Also burned was stock, office equipment and furniture in the upstairs apartment.

Flames soaring high into the air could be seen as far away as Plainfield.

Firemen had the blaze under control by shortly after nine o'clock but the Tweed fire department continued to pour water onto the burning embers throughout the night, to guard against further outbreaks.

There was little damage at the adjoining Louis Rashotte garage but smoke entered the "Bun" Rashotte apartment overhead and furniture was carried to safety.

The blaze is believed to have started in the ground floor garage and was discovered by Mr. and Mrs. Rivers about 6:30 when they noticed smoke drifting into their upstairs apartment.

Already, however, smoke filled the entire downstairs area and nothing was saved except a few tires from a showroom window.

WEDDING

FINCH — RAMSAY

A quiet wedding was solemnized recently in Queensboro United Church when Muriel Irene Ramsay, daughter of Mr. Fred Ramsay of Queensboro, and the late Mrs. Ramsay, was united in marriage to Lindsay Garland Finch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Finch of Rylstone. Rev. Wendell Sedgwick officiated and wedding music was rendered by Mr. William Glover.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a blue flowered silk dress with black accessories and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Jack Ranshorn of Oshawa, who wore a powder blue suit with black accessories.

Mr. Dennis Finch was groomsmen for his brother.

At the reception in the Sunday School hall at Queensboro church, the bride's grandmother received the guests wearing a navy blue ensemble with a yellow carnation corsage. Assisting was the bridegroom's mother, who wore a blue lace dress, matching blue hat, black and white accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

Leaving on the wedding trip to Niagara Falls, the bride donned a powder blue dress, fur jacket, black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations.

Upon return the couple will reside at West Bridge Street, Campbellford. Previous to the marriage the bride was guest of honour at several miscellaneous showers held in Madoc and Queensboro.

SUGAR AND SPICE

by Bill Smiley

The ordeal is over

This is the time of year — between Christmas and New Year — when some people wish they were Muslims or Buddhists. Yes, that Christmas caper is getting rougher and rougher. Worse than the Feast of Ramadan.

The main bout, Christmas itself, went off smoothly enough. It's the preliminaries that almost murdered us.

One of the first, and the worst, of them, was Christmas Card Night. The kitchen table was a melange of cards, stamps, envelopes and lists.

About half the cards are no trouble at all. You merely sign your name. But you're working with some left-over cards from last year, some new ones. There's always the haunting fear that you sent exactly the same card, with the same message, to the same person last Christmas. This doesn't bother me, but my wife, knowing what women are like about these things, gets the trembles over it.

It's the remainder of the cards, however, that turns the whole thing into a bit of a nightmare. These are the cards to old friends. Each requires a cute, or sentimental, or witty note.

Try writing 50 such notes of an evening, and it takes more out of you than a day in the salt mines.

Such inanities. Such garbage. Such coyness. Such insincerity. You don't believe it? A sample:

To a couple you met on a trip six years ago, who live 1,200 miles away. "We still remember the wonderful times we had. Why can't we get together for a week end? Does Jim still do his famous trick? Our kids are certainly growing up. How about yours?"

You know perfectly well they were dull as porridge, that you would take off like the Canada goose if you even dreamed they were coming to visit, that Jim was stoned and made a mess of his trick. You know your kids have grown up, but you're not even sure they have any kids. And you have to look up their last name in your Christmas register.

It would be a lot more fun sending brief, pungent notes to political leaders and such, with messages like this: "Holiday greetings. Why don't you drop dead?"

Another of the preliminaries which grabs you where it hurts is Christmas Tree Night. This is the annual event which makes me destroy, with my family, the image which I have built up, so carefully, during the preceding 12 months.

This event drives me into a frenzy which neither psychology, science nor faith can explain. It's not exactly a religious frenzy, though I must admit the Lord's name comes up with awesome frequency.

I've tried them all. Iron stands, aluminum stands, wooden stands, buckets of coal. And the damn thing invariably winds up with the same list as a sailor on the sixth day of a seven-day leave.

The last, and not the least of the preliminaries is Gift-Wrapping Night. You wander around, having a drink and giving the Christmas tree the odd quiet kick, while your wife gets the paper and presents out.

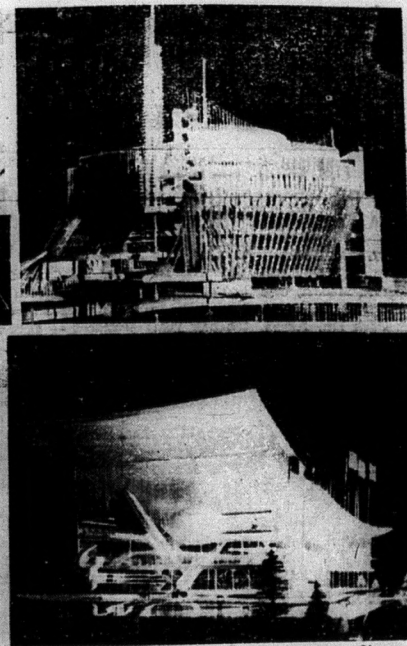

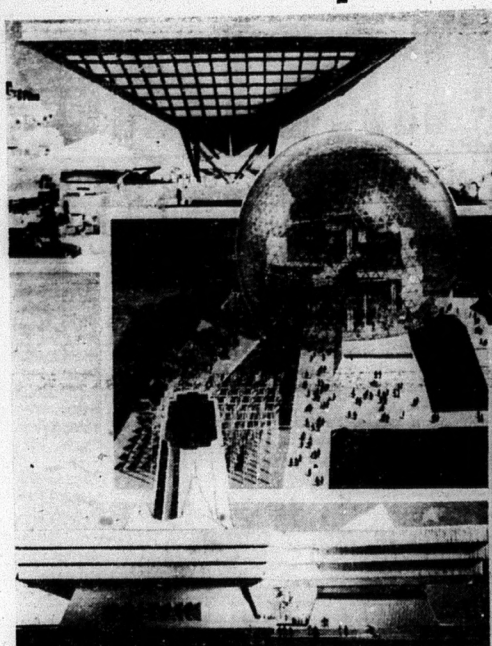

Nothing fits. The expensive gold paper bought to wrap Aunt Flo's present isn't big enough, and you wind up wrapping it in that cheap junk from Woolworths. Oh, well, there goes a $5,000 legacy.

Then there's the pre-Christmas party. We've had one for the past six years. Ask me why and I'll explain to you why I'm not in a mental home. But high on the list for admittance.

You'll notice I haven't even mentioned Christmas shopping, which is a form of self-destructive exercise, better than any yet invented. Nor Christmas "music," which is neither music nor Christmas. Nor Christmas lights on the cruddy cedar on your front lawn.

Oh, well, the heck with it. It's all over now. But that doesn't prevent me from doing something pleasant, in the midst of all these pains in the posterior.

I'd rather shake hands, or kiss you, depending on your sex. But I can't. To all my readers, from Newfoundland to the Yukon, and down to B.C., and then across the prairies, and through the old provinces and down as far again as Shelburne, N.S., permit me to say, "God bless and good heart."

THE GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH. This is the phrase being used when Expo 67 is the topic of conversation. Shown above are the Katimavik, an inverted pyramid, which will be the focal point of the Canadian Government's exhibit. It will be the largest national pavilion at the exhibition. Others will be (anticlockwise) the United States pavilion, featuring a huge dome; the British pavilion; the Soviet Union pavilion where visitors will experience the weightlessness of being in space; and the French pavilion, where the theme will be tradition and invention.—TNS Photo

advice from
Doris Clark

Too young for horses

DEAR DORIS — I am 19 and wish to buy a horse. As I am working and earning my own living I can meet the financial responsibilities. I have $500 saved with which to buy it and all necessary equipment.

The problem is this: Do I need my parents' permission to buy a horse? They do not want me to.

Love of Horses

DEAR LOVER — At 19 you are still an infant in the eyes of the law; so you cannot contract to buy anything not considered a "Necessary." It would take a wild stretch of the imagination to thus classify a horse.

This is why a car salesman always insists that a parent join in the purchase agreement of a minor. If your horse dealer sells to you without this, he runs a risk, since he could not sue in the case of your failing to pay.

Then again, your parents must not allow you to acquire any "dangerous thing." Unless you are a past master at horse handling, it could be a plenty dangerous thing for you.

Better wait until you are 21. DEAR DORIS — You might laugh at my problem but it sure isn't a laughing matter with me. I nursed both of my babies and after I quit I lost my figure completely.

I might be able to get used to it if it wasn't for my husband who keeps teasing me about it and giving out insults. If he sees another girl with a good figure he rants and raves and carries on.

When I tried talking to him about it he told me I shouldn't be so touchy.

No Figure DEAR NO — What gives Faultless Freddie carte blanche to pull somebody else apart and then call her touchy?

It's a perverted sense of humor which works at deflating the other fellow. Your so-called loving husband needs to open up his narrow world and start thinking along more interesting lines — and I don't mean curves!

There are padded bras, which are fashions which help the figure. If you are underweight you can build up your diet. But most of all, the man who is supposed to care about you needs to improve his conversation.

DEAR DORIS — About borrowed books which are not returned, I have a suggestion. I keep a list of books loaned, time, name and address of borrower. And on the first page of each book I place the following:

This book I lend with pleasure,
Pray read it at your leisure!

I only ask, my trusted friend,
That you'll return it at the end,
For ALL my books I treasure!

This works very well indeed. Bookish

DEAR BOOKISH — Good for you. I'm glad to hear it works. It does seem a pity not to share a favorite book, but one hesitates when there is high likelihood of its never returning.

DEAR DORIS — Please help me, a mother of a teen-age boy who received his grade 13, and has a good job but boards at home. What amount of money should I expect from him?

He has all the privileges of our humble home and I wash and iron for him. We are farmers who are not financially well off. Kindly answer this so that both my son and I will be better aware what is done in other homes.

A mother who wants to play fair

DEAR MOTHER — We cannot set down an arbitrary amount. What he pays depends on (1) what he earns; (2) what he needs, including what entertaining he does; and (3) what it costs you to maintain your home and table.

The cost of living differs depending on whether you live in town or country, in the western or eastern or northern part of Canada. I suggest you find out what you are paying for everything (not omitting rent or taxes), then divide this by number in family; figure out his share and add an amount to cover, realistically, the appreciable service given in washing and ironing and cleaning for him.

You won't be unfair. Arrive at your final board amount in consultation with your son and his father.

Centennial Report

1867 1967 by JOHN W. FISHER
CENTENNIAL COMMISSIONER

Canada's teachers have the opportunity in 1967 to help make a visit to the Confederation Train or Caravan exhibitions a memorable and valuable experience.

The Train, starting January 9 at Victoria on a cross-Canada tour of 63 cities, and the Confederation Caravans, visiting more than 700 communities are, in effect, travelling teaching aids. The story of Canada from primeval times will unfold before the eyes of children as they experience, by sight and sound, an adventure through history. Life-size models, sound effects, lighting, artifacts and photography will enable children to live through great events since the pre-ice-age era.

Standing on the timbered deck of a Viking ship at sea or peering through the slit of a sandbagged trench in Norman's land amid the din of battle—such experiences produce a more lasting impression than would a film or television program.

Visitors to the exhibits will be in a three dimensional world which will affect all their senses. As a good stage presentation usually creates a more lasting impression than does the two dimensional cinema or television screen, so will the Confederation exhibits influence youngsters.

The exhibits also are likely to develop a curiosity among children, and adults too, about the historical background of our country. A journalist, commenting on a pre-tour visit to the exhibits, told us that they "make you want to head for the library to check the why's and where's" of certain developments in Canadian history.

What, for example, were the underlying reasons for the Riel rebellion in 1885? Were English laws enforced in Canada up to 1931 when the Statute of Westminster was passed? Were the west coast Indians descendants of early immigrants of Asia? Questions like those are prompted by a visit to the Train or Caravans.

A Quebec writer visiting the Train also said, "It's like another world to me — I've discovered so much about the history of the West I simply didn't know anything about."

The Train or Caravan exhibits do not constitute a complete history of Canada. In fact there are many gaps. But they do provide a broad impression. Teachers can ensure that a visit is a valuable experience by helping beforehand to fill in some gaps in the exhibits story and in children's knowledge of history.

A guide to classroom discussions is to reach the desks of teachers, well before the Train and Caravans arrive in communities, in the form of an attractive Centennial Commission color folder. It indicates how the story of Canada is told by the exhibits. Classroom discussion based on the folder can help children grasp the significance of what they will see and hear on their visits.

The Centennial Commission has a great appreciation for the contribution teachers can make to the Train and Caravan projects. Pre-ice-age rain forest in one of the travelling Confederation exhibits.

The December meeting of the Queensboro Women's Institute was held in the Sunday School room of the United Church.

Mrs. Ed Alexander, the president, was in charge. It was decided to give gifts to the senior citizens at the Rauws Nursing Home and the Alexander Home.

The remainder of the meeting was a Christmas party for the children of the community and their mothers. About 50 children were present. Several musical selections were given. Miss Ruthanne Tanner, guest speaker, showed pictures of places she had visited on a trip to the United Nations last summer.

Lunch was served at the close of the meeting and the children were given treats of candy.

The January meeting will be at the home of Mrs. W. Cassidy.

We were glad to have snow for a white Christmas.

The Hi-C Carriers of Queensboro Charge called at homes in Cooper on Thursday evening.

NEW SHORT COURSE FOR FARMERS

As a result of enquiries and interest shown by farmers and farm groups, a new short course is planned for the County of Hastings. It will be for a three-week period, and will take place in Legion Hall, Stirling, January 23rd to February 10th, inclusive. The course will run five days a week during the dates mentioned, starting at 11:00 a.m. and concluding at 3:30 p.m. The intention of the course is to offer the most up-to-date information possible. This information will be specifically related to particular farm problems. The information will come under the various headings: farm income tax; farm credit; production problems; and business management. In addition to these, there will be one or two feature days. For example, on February 8, those attending the Short Course will attend the Mastitis Workshop which is being planned for Stirling.

The importance of good business management in the farm business is well understood. Part of this depends on some form of records, and now a new feature is coming into the picture. This involves the farmer in such things as Workmen's Compensation, Unemployment Insurance, Canada Pension Plan, and OMSIP. To take full advantage of these, an accurate accounting system must be used. This is not difficult, it is mostly a matter of getting it started properly so it can be kept up-to-date. It is our intention to try to provide this information in a short course.

A nominal registration fee will be charged in the amount of $5.00. This will be used to provide supplementary material and any additional costs which are necessary. Any part of the fee which is not required will be refunded at the conclusion of the course on the basis of attendance and participation. The course is designed to operate during the middle of the day to provide the least possible interference with normal farm work of the wintertime.

SELF-EMPLOYED FARMERS SHOULD SEND PENSION PAYMENT

Before January 1, 1967 remember to send part of your Canada Pension Plan payment for 1966 to the Taxation Data Centre, P.O. Box 477, Ottawa, Ontario, advises economist Alan Teskey, Kempenville Agricultural School.

Each self-employed farmer pays on the basis of his earnings which is his actual income for the year from all businesses less all expenses from such businesses. In the case of farmers it is the "net farm income" figure as calculated for Income Tax purposes. It is not the "taxable income" figure and it does not include earnings received by an individual.

(a) before he reaches 18 years of age
(b) during any month for which a disability pension was payable to him
(c) after he reaches 70 years of age or dies
(d) after a retirement pension becomes payable to him.

Any self-employed farmer must have a net farm income of $800.00 to be covered by the Plan. Once he is covered by the Plan (i.e. $800.00 or more net farm income) he pays 3.6% of all earnings over $600.00 and less than $5,000.00. The most that any farmer pays on is $5,000.00 - 600.00 or $4,400.00.

A farmer is required to pay on or before December 31st, 1966, two-thirds of contributions as estimated by him for 1966 and the balance paid on or before April 30th of 1967. Note: if the contribution for 1966 is $40.00 or less the whole amount may be paid on or before April 30th of 1967.

For example, suppose a farmer's net farm income for 1966 was estimated by him to be $2,800.00 subtract basic exemption of 600.00 $2,200.00

Take 3.6% of $2,200.00 equals $79.20 total Canada Pension Plan contribution.

He would pay two-thirds of $79.20 or $52.80 by December 31st, 1966 and pay the other one-third or $26.40 on or before April 30th, 1967, for a total of $79.20 Canada Pension Plan contribution.

QUINTE STEER SHOW AND SALE

WINTER DRIVING

What causes most accidents?

(1) Inattentive Driving.
(2) Not having the right of way.
(3) Speed too fast for road or traffic conditions.

What can you do to help prevent accidents this winter, thus saving lives or painful injury?

Well, this slogan may be the key - "Bad weather causes accidents to fair weather drivers." You must winterize your car or truck, your driving techniques and your determination to avoid accidents.

Following are a few suggestions we hope will enable you to get through the winter accident free.

(1) Your car - keep the windshield and windows clear, be sure the wipers, heater and defroster are working. Ventilate to keep the vehicle from fogging up.

(2) Have good tires, preferably snow tires, use chains in severe conditions. Chains give you five times as much starting ability on glare ice as regular tires and statistics show that snow tires give you 28 per cent more traction than regular tires.

(3) When you first start out, get the feel of the road, try your brakes or gently press the accelerator while driving slowly - when traffic permits.

(4) Keep well back of the vehicle in front of you, it takes from three to twelve times farther to stop on ice. If someone follows you too closely, pull over and let him pass, don't let him involve you in an accident.

(5) Pump your brakes to maintain best steering control when braking on ice or snow. Remember, as the temperature rises, ice becomes more slippery.

(6) If you skid, steer instantly in the direction of the skid.

(7) When in or near built-up areas, watch out for children tobogganing or running from behind parked cars, or vehicles pulling out from driveways or parked positions. Remember how much farther it takes you to stop on ice and snow.

(8) Reduce your speed, if you have an appointment to keep, or just going home from work. Remember, "The life you save may be your own."

(9) Pay particular attention to highway signs. Curve signs everyone tends to ignore in the summer, come in real handy on ice and snow covered roads, especially on unfamiliar roads.

(10) Lastly, try to be a defensive driver rather than an offensive driver. A defensive driver is one who is careful to commit no driving errors himself; who makes allowances for the lack of skill or improper attitude on the part of the other fellow and who does not allow hazards of weather or road conditions or the action of pedestrians and other drivers to involve him in an accident. An offensive driver uses his horn, a defensive driver uses his brakes.

The Madoc Detachment, Ontario Provincial Police, reports a week of very light activity.

Detachment officers investigated only three minor accidents, none of which involved injuries. Forty-five vehicles were checked, thirty-seven warnings issued and four charges laid.

Officers on general duties investigated seventeen occurrences, including one theft, one disturbance and two requests for assistance. On December 18, 1966, a hunting camp in Tudor Twp. owned by Mr. Walter Monroe of Glen Miller, Ont., was destroyed by fire. The building valued at $2,000.00 was covered by insurance.

Twenty-two hours were spent in Magistrate's Court which saw 17 convictions registered.

A total of 520 man hours were worked and 5,031 miles logged on detachment roads.

of the feeding system used. There are classes for senior exhibitors, junior exhibitors and the rate of gain class. Top prize money is $45.00. It is an open competition. Publicity so far has gone to the members of the Beef Improvement groups in the four Quinte counties, also to the 4-H members in the four counties who would be entitled to enter the feeding project.

Extra rules and entry forms are available from the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Food Offices in Stirling and Picton. An exhibitor may enter a total of two steers. Entries must be made by the 1st of April.

MUST PASS EXAMINATION TO RIDE MOTORCYCLE

90-day instruction permits for the operation of motorcycles in Ontario will be abolished early in 1967, Transport Minister Irwin Haskett announced recently.

The change is among a set of new regulations governing the examining and licensing of motorcycle riders in the province.

Starting January 1st, anyone applying for a license to ride a motorcycle will be required to pass an examination in its operation.

He will be issued a driver's license endorsed for the operation of motorcycles only.

After March 31st, it will be an offence to ride a motorcycle in Ontario without a driver's license bearing a motorcycle endorsement.

An applicant wishing to operate other motor vehicles in addition to motorcycles must pass a separate examination and will then receive a license endorsed for both.

Persons who now operate motorcycles on driver's licenses will be able to convert their licenses to include the motorcycle endorsement provided they can prove they are experienced drivers.

The new motorcycle drivers' examinations will include both written and practical tests. The written portions will include all questions on the regular driver's examination as well as questions regarding safe motorcycle operation.

After passing the written test, the applicant must be able to identify and illustrate the use of the controls on his vehicle. He must also demonstrate starting and stopping, brake and clutch control and balance.

Mr. Haskett said that Ontario is among the first jurisdictions in North America to introduce regulations specifically aimed at safe operation of motorcycles.

The need for them arose from the extraordinary recent growth of the use of motorcycles in the province and in the number of accidents in which they have been involved.

At the end of September this year, there were 36,827 motorcycles registered in this province, 59 per cent more than at the end of September, 1965. The 1965 increase was 133 per cent over the previous year.

Also, up to the end of September this year, motorcycles were involved in 3,221 accidents — in which there were 42 fatalities and 2,475 injuries. In all of 1965 there were 2,390 motorcycle accidents, compared with 837 in 1964.

Many of the motorcycle riders involved in these accidents were in the 16-19 age group, and among these there were many who were learners operating on instruction permits.

YOU MUST PAY FOR IT

Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp's supplementary budget, The Financial Post comments, abides by two principles which our political leaders in the past have honoured more in the breach than in practice. 1. The price of more generous social welfare programs is higher taxes. There is, despite the festive season, no Santa Claus. Tax rates on incomes and on sales of most goods will go up almost precisely the amount needed to cover higher old age security payments. 2. Governments can and must promote stable growth. This requires constant and sophisticated change in federal tax and money policies. The latest tax changes are specifically designed neither to quicken nor depress an economy that is in delicate balance between inflation and deflation. The Financial Post says. If business activity in coming months requires new stimulus or further dampening, Sharp states, taxes will be changed to bring about the desired end. The Financial Post argues that the Finance Minister may well come under fire for raising the indirect tax on sales to 12 from 11%. The rise in such levies, as the Economic Council of Canada points out, "has been a significant factor in the rise in prices which has taken place over the past decade and a half." In short, consumer prices in Canada will notch up a little. This puts Canadian industry in a slightly less competitive position to the extent that it encourages a cost advance.

BELL TELEPHONE OFFERS CENTENNIAL FELLOWSHIP

Financial support for education at the graduate level was announced today by the Bell Telephone Company of Canada in the form of a Centennial Fellowship Program.

In making the announcement, Bell president, Marcel Vincent pointed out that the support of higher education is one of Canada's most urgent needs.

"The Company," he said, "primarily wants to provide Canadian students with financial assistance in achieving their objectives at the post-graduate level. Secondly, we are striving to broaden and strengthen the relationship between the Company and the Universities, and finally, we want to participate actively in achieving the national goal of developing highly qualified manpower to meet Canada's growing needs."

The fellowships are open to any outstanding Canadian student who is a graduate of a university or college with standards accepted by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. The AUCC, which will administer the fellowship program represents the great majority — 59 — of degree-granting institutions in Canada.

The candidates must intend to pursue graduate studies in Canada at a university or college which is a member or affiliate of the AUCC.

The program establishes eight graduate fellowships. Four will be awarded in 1967. Renewals and new awards will raise the annual total to eight in subsequent years.

Successful candidates will receive $3,500. In addition, $1,500 will be given to the university to pay for tuition and help defray other expenses of the university's graduate study program.

There is no restriction on the nature of the studies which a successful candidate may pursue, although preference is given to those subject areas which appear relevant to the scientific, political, social or economic needs of Canada.
